Great Artists Their Works By Great Aut:

Music Trades ,1918 Ivan Fedorovich Shponka and his Aunt Nikolai Gogol,2024-05-09 This unfinished story from Mirgorod signals Gogol's shift from folklore to social satire. The titular Ivan, a meek landowner, is manipulated by his domineering aunt into marrying her choice of bride, a prospect he approaches with comical passivity. Gogol's deadpan prose exposes the banality of provincial life, where trivial disputes and petty ambitions consume characters devoid of inner depth. The narrative's abrupt ending, mid-sentence, heightens its absurdist critique, suggesting the futility of seeking resolution in a world devoid of meaning. While lacking the psychological complexity of Tolstoy's Anna Karenina, its focus on societal triviality prefigures Chekhov's stories of existential stagnation. Shponka's haplessness mirrors the bureaucratic inertia Gogol would later skewer in The Overcoat, cementing his reputation as a chronicler of modern ennui. The tale's abrupt conclusion, with a surreal dream sequence followed by the narrator's claim to have lost the manuscript, represents one of Russian literature's earliest experiments with deliberate narrative incompleteness, a technique that would later be deployed with different aims by Dostoevsky in works like The Double. Literary scholars have identified this text as marking Gogol's transition toward the literary territory he would fully develop in Dead Souls, the absurdist comedy of Russian provincial life where even the most mundane existence contains surreal elements when observed with sufficient attention. While lacking the overt social criticism that would characterize the naturalist works of writers like Chekhov, Shponka nevertheless establishes an important precedent in Russian literature's examination of little men whose unremarkable lives become worthy of literary attention precisely because of their typicality rather than their exceptionality. Ivan Fedorovich Shponka and His Aunt offers a glimpse into the life of a young man named Ivan Shponka, a character portrayed as meticulous and somewhat simple-minded, whose life is meticulously detailed from his school days to his military service and eventual return to his aunt's estate. As a child, Ivan was known for his exceptional neatness and diligence, even being appointed as a class monitor, traits that earned him the favor of a strict teacher. After completing his education, he enters the military, where his timidity and preference for solitude set him apart from his more boisterous comrades, leading him to spend his time polishing buttons and engaging in quiet pursuits. Upon the death of his mother, Ivan receives a letter from his aunt, his mother's sister, urging him to return home to manage his inherited farm in the town of Gadyach. During his journey, he encounters a portly landowner named Grigory Grigorivich, who claims to be a neighbor and invites Ivan to visit, setting the stage for potential conflicts over land ownership. Arriving at his aunt's estate, Ivan finds her to be a robust and somewhat masculine figure who exerts a strong influence over the household. He learns that a significant portion of land rightfully belonging to him is being occupied by his neighbor, Grigory Grigorivich, leading to an awkward confrontation. The introduction of Grigory's daughters, Ivan's aunt becomes fixated on the idea of him marrying one of the daughters, causing Ivan considerable anxiety and culminating in a bizarre and unsettling nightmare about marriage. The story abruptly ends with a mention of a next chapter that never materializes.

leaving the reader with a sense of incompleteness and prompting speculation about Gogol's intentions. This unfinished tale while seemingly simple offers a glimpse into Gogol's developing style and his exploration of themes such as social anxieties, the fear of commitment and the peculiarities of human relationships in provincial Russia. This modern edition features a contemporary translation from the original Russian manuscript making his surrealist and existential literature accessible to readers and enhanced by an illuminating afterword that focuses on Gogol's relationship with Dostoevsky, Tolstoy and Turgenev and his influence of Kafka and other surrealist absurdist writers, a concise biography including his Ukrainian heritage and a detailed chronology of his life and major works. This robust reader's edition introduces readers to the brilliance of Gogol's literature and the context in which he wrote. Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology William Smith, 1849 Encyclopaedia Londinensis John Wilkes, 1821 The House of Happiness Barbara Cartland, 2012-08-14

Eugenia Dovedale's father had been High Steward to the Marquis of Buckbury and after her father's unexpected death Eugenia had to leave Paragon, the family's beautiful and much loved cottage on the estate. She and her mother now lived uncomfortably with her Great aunt Cloris in London as they could not afford anywhere else. Mrs Dovedale maintained strong hopes of her daughter making a good marriage and improving their position. She was thrilled when the Marquis returned from France and began to show considerable interest in Eugenia. However Eugenia was determined only to marry for love and passion and she dreamed of being swept off her feet. She resisted the overtures of the Marquis and then a Russian painter called Gregor Brodosky came to paint her great aunt and Eugenia fell for his obviously charms and goodlooks. Mrs Dovedale suffered a nasty coach accident and the Marquis invited her and Eugenia to stay at Buckbury Abbey to recover. The Marquis's admiration of Eugenia intensified and her mother more than ever pushed her towards the Marquis but Eugenia's heart longed for Gregor. Her life became more and more distraught and confusing particularly when Gregor arrived at Buckbury to paint Eugenia a portrait. How she eventually found happiness at Paragon and realised her dreams after many twists and turns is told in this intriguing and spellbinding story. Classical Music Alexander J. Morin, 2002
