ISLAMIC PERSPECTIVES AND PANDEMIC IN ENGLISH LITERATURE Hasnul Insani Djohar, Willy Oktaviano, How did you feel when you see your students are struggling to understand heavy literary texts written by mainstream British or American writers such as William Shakespeare and Ernest Hemingway Indeed the students have no ideas about the texts contexts and the texts do not relate to their cultures Of course they feel alienation strangers and foreigners in their classes and their countries such as Indonesia Indonesia has the largest Muslim population in the world but it seems that it has no power to distribute its own fruitful cultures which has more than 3000 distinct cultures and at least 700 active languages from Sabang to Merauke to its young generations To incorporate this rich Indonesian culture and religion such as Islam this book inspires Indonesian lecturers and global English lecturers to use our traditions such as Muslim traditions in teaching English or literature This idea aims to develop our students understanding in learning English literature in a more meaningful way as they learn it by relating it with their traditions and religion that they practice every day instead of merely studying foreign western cultures and literature without understanding first their own traditions This book provides an example of how to incorporate our students cultures such as Muslim cultures and Islamic perspectives in understanding Western cultures and literature to establish a justice equal society and a more globally civilized society which appreciates different people regardless of their different cultural and religious backgrounds In doing so this book decolonizes white supremacy which tends to dominate language and literature in the world By engaging with Islamic perspectives in investigating English literature this book inspires global English literary scholars to decolonize English literary curriculum by incorporating Islamic studies in investigating the English texts to make our students learn English texts in a more meaningful way as it relates to their traditions and daily lives

Racial Asymmetries Stephen Hong Sohn,2014-01-17 Challenging the tidy links among authorial position narrative perspective and fictional content Stephen Hong Sohn argues that Asian American authors have never been limited to writing about Asian American characters or contexts Racial Asymmetries specifically examines the importance of first person narration in Asian American fiction published in the postrace era focusing on those cultural productions in which the author's ethnoracial makeup does not directly overlap with that of the storytelling perspective Through rigorous analysis of novels and short fiction such as Sesshu Foster's Atomik Aztex Sabina Murray's A Carnivore's Inquiry and Sigrid Nunez's The Last of Her Kind Sohn reveals how the construction of narrative perspective allows the Asian American writer a flexible aesthetic canvas upon which to engage issues of oppression and inequity power and subjectivity and the complicated construction of racial identity Speaking to concerns running through postcolonial studies and American literature at large Racial Asymmetries employs an interdisciplinary approach to reveal the unbounded nature of fictional worlds

After the Fall Richard Gray,2011-05-03 After the Fall A common refrain heard since the collapse of the World Trade Center towers on September 11 2001 is that everything has changed After the Fall presents a timely and provocative examination of the impact and implications of 9 11 and the war on terror on American culture and literature Author Richard Gray widely regarded as the leading European scholar in American literature reveals the widespread belief among novelists dramatists and poets as well as the American public at large that in the post 9 11 world they are all somehow living after the fall He carefully considers how many writers faced with what they see as the end of their world have retreated into the seductive pieties of home hearth and family and how their works are informed by the equally seductive myth of American exceptionalism As a counterbalance Gray also discusses in depth the many writings that get it right transnational and genuinely crossbred works that resist the oppositional and simplistic us and them Christian and Muslim language that has dominated mainstream commentary These imaginative works Gray believes choose instead to respond to the heterogeneous character of the United States as well as its necessary positioning in a transnational context After the Fall offers illuminating insights into the relationships of such issues as nationalism trauma culture and literature during a time of profound crisis
