

Gravity

Adding motion to the Universe

Gravity forms stars, planets, and moons, and forces these objects to spin on an axis and move along an orbital path. The planets appear to be orbiting the center of the Sun, but the Sun and planets all orbit a shared center of mass. Planets with enough mass can develop orbiting moons or rings of debris.

Creating energy

Gravity is the force that creates pressure and fusion energy in the core of stars allowing them to burn for millions of years.
