Paul Revere see the town as it once was and as it is today The American Skyscraper, 1850-1940 Joseph J. Korom, 2008
The skyscraper is an American invention that has captured the public's imagination for over a century. The tall building is wholly manmade and borne in the minds of those with both slide rules and computers. This is the story of the skyscraper's rise and the recognition of those individuals who contributed to its development. This volume is unique in its approach: information and images are fresh and telling. The text examines America's first tall buildings, the result of twelve years of in-depth research by an accomplished and published architect and architectural historian. Over 300 compelling photographs, charts, and notes make this the ultimate tool of reference for this subject. Biographies woven throughout with period norms, politics, and lifestyles help to place featured skyscrapers in context. Quite simply, there is no book like this. The text, carefully and insightfully written, is clear, concise, and easily digestible; the text being the product of well-documented original research written in an informative tone. The American Skyscraper 1850-1940: A Celebration of Height is a richly documented journey of a fascinating topic and it promises to be a superb addition to libraries, schools of architecture, students of architecture, and lovers of art. Country and Suburban Homes of the Prairie School Period H. American Book Publishing Record, 1991 American Motherhood Della Thompson Lutes, 1901 Designing MIT Mark Jarzombek, 2004 Chartered in 1861, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology lay in financial crisis with an assortment of laboratories, classrooms, offices, and student facilities scattered across Boston's Back Bay by the turn of the century. But in 1912, backed by some of the country's leading financiers and industrialists, MIT officials purchased an undeveloped tract of land in Cambridge, launching a long and complex review of proposals for a new quadrangle. Based largely on the recommendation of John D. Rockefeller Jr., the commission was awarded to MIT and the École des Beaux-Arts-trained architect William Welles Bosworth, known for his AT Desire Despradelle. Chairman of the Department of Architecture at MIT and a leading Beaux-Arts stylist, Ralph Adams Cram, noted for his gothic West Point campus, and John Freeman, one of the country's leading civil engineers. Mark M. Jarzombek provides a captivating cross-section of the architectural debates of the time. Though Bosworth's considerable social and political finesse enabled him to land the commission and balance varied competing interests, he found his classically oriented vision challenged by engineer John Freeman, proponent of Frederick W. Taylor's new principle of Scientific Management. However, strained the conflict ultimately resulted in a far more innovative design than either individual approach, employing new European concepts of industrialism, efficiency, and aesthetics in academic structures.

Heavily illustrated with images from MIT archives the story of Bosworth's new Tech offers more than just insight into the designing of a campus Wrought with artistic clashes bureaucratic tangles and contemporary politics Designing MIT sheds light on the academic culture in the early twentieth century the role of patronage in the world of architecture and the history of the Beaux Arts style in the United States Subject Guide to Books in Print ,1997 Vernacular Architecture Newsletter ,1983 Uniform Trade List Annual ,1989
