

The two scale charts below show the different positions between the 'major' and the 'minor' pentatonic scales. They are in fact the exact same scale but just played in a different place on the fret board.

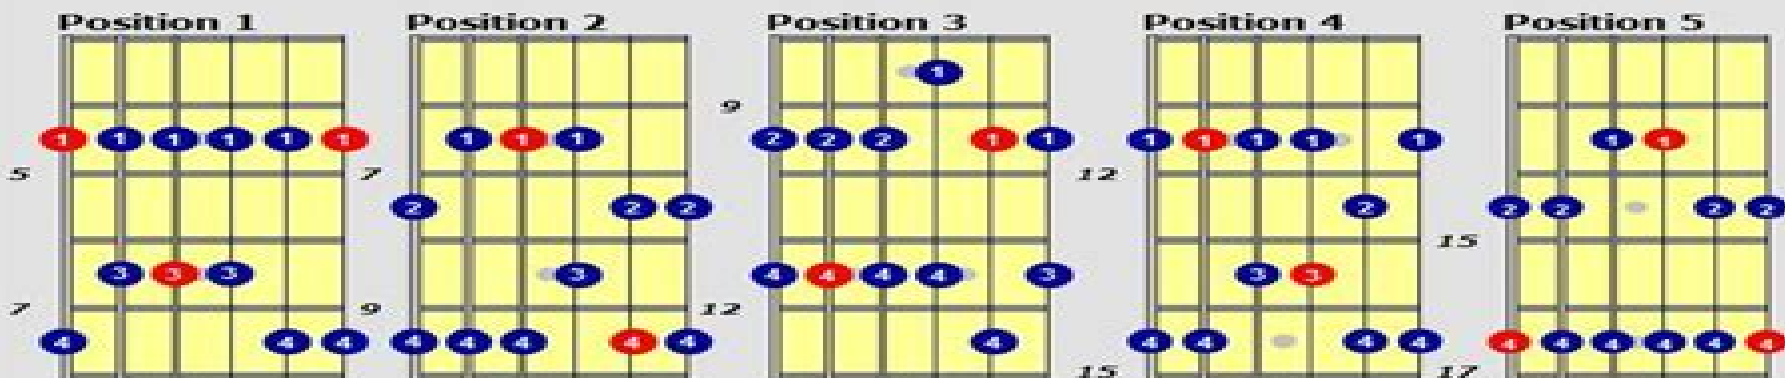

Note: The fifth and last position shape of either scale can actually be played behind the first position shape of the same scale. In fact all the positions of each shape can be played in two places. This principle applies to all scales and offers a lot of scope for creativity all over the neck! Pay attention to the fret numbers.
