Evaluation and Accountability in Clinical Training E. Berler, Barry A. Edelstein, 2013-11-11 Accountability in clinical training implies a strong relationship between the training outcomes touted by a training program and the performance of its graduates The training program and its faculty must be able to ensure that students have the competencies necessary for entering the profession and can offer competent services In addition responsibility for the quality and value of training must be assumed by the profession Pressure for accountability is becoming increasingly apparent as the public learns about fraud waste and abuse in publicly funded programs Fishman Neigher 1982 Federally supported clinical training programs have had to defend their training practices against threats of funding loss without the hard data needed to support their practices

Funding seems to have been forthcoming mostly because of our ability to demonstrate the need for clinical counseling and school psychologists. Graduates seeking professional careers in such applied fields demand considerable trust from their clientele and the public at large when they establish themselves. Offer and advertise their services, make claims on public monies and profess to do good and no harm. Neither their clientele nor the public are in the position to evaluate the services of the profession or the claims made for these.

Nursing Standard. International Best Practices for Evaluation in the Health Professions. William McGaghie, 2022-02-16. This unique text presents a comprehensive narrative on why and how health professions students need to be evaluated for practice in the 21st century. It systematically addresses current evaluation best practices in the health professions to identify today's evaluation benchmarks, reveal evaluation limits, address improvement pathways and map a research agenda to boost future evaluation practices. Advancements in information and communication technology, bioscience and behavioral research and worldwide travel are dissolving barriers that have separated professions, countries and cultures for centuries. This book both celebrates these achievements and carefully considers next steps. It recognizes the huge improvements made in evaluation practices within the health professions over the past 40 years but asks for more, calling for added reform and better understanding of current practice from different social, cultural and educational perspectives.

International Best Practices for Evaluation in the Health Professions values crossprofessional programs that span boundaries and acknowledge the authority of the future rather than historical baggage. Educators worldwide will be enlightened and inspired by its straightforward, compelling narrative.
