and under very long thin grass, in a low swampy place, about 10 miles from the mouth of the river, I found a large number of them. They were all black, and had a short, thick coat of hair, and small, round eyes. The body was covered with a fine, white, downy hair, which was especially noticeable on the head and neck. The legs were also covered with this hair, and the feet were small and webbed. The tail was long and pointed, and the wings were small and folded close to the body. The color of the skin was a dark brown, and the overall appearance was that of a small, furry animal.

There is a small house in the town of St. John, N. B., which is a very fine specimen of the architecture of the country. It is a two-story building, with a gabled roof, and is surrounded by a garden. The house is built of brick, and has a very comfortable and pleasant appearance. It is a very good specimen of the architecture of the country, and is a very fine specimen of the architecture of the country.
