The Funeral Party Ludmila Ulitskaya, 2002-01-15 August 1991 In a sweltering New York City apartment a group of Russian migrants gathers round the deathbed of an artist named Alik a charismatic character beloved by them all especially the women who take turns nursing him as he fades from this world Their reminiscences of the dying man and of their lives in Russia are punctuated by debates and squabbles Whom did Alik love most Should he be baptized before he dies as his alcoholic wife Nina desperately wishes or be reconciled to the faith of his birth by a rabbi who happens to be on hand And what will be the meaning for them of the Yeltsin putsch which is happening across the world in their long lost Moscow but also right before their eyes on CNN This marvelous group of individuals inhabits the first novel by Ludmila Ulitskaya to be published in English a book that was shortlisted for the Russian Booker Prize and has been praised wherever translated editions have appeared Simultaneously funny and sad lyrical in its Russian sorrow and devastatingly keen in its observation of character The Funeral Party introduces to our shores a wonderful writer who captures wryly and tenderly our complex thoughts and emotions confronting life and death love and loss homeland and exile

The Funeral Party Ludmila Ulitskaya, 2015-08-20 In a small apartment in New York in the sweltering mid summer heat a group of Russian migrants gather around the sickbed of an artist named Alik Nina his wife is desperate for Alik to be baptised Irina his ex lover a circus acrobat turned lawyer quietly pays the bills elderly Maria dispenses magical herbs and Maika Irina's fifteen year old daughter prepares to lose the only man to make her laugh As the visitors fuss and reminisce over Alik in a corner of the crowded room the television shows the uprising outside the White House in Moscow and the tanks closing in on the city

The Funeral Party Людмила Улицкая, 1999 It's a very Russian novel that is remarkably accessible to Western readers The author has created a microcosm of Moscow in New York All the real time action of the novel takes place in an apartment where you feel all the characters are sealed off from the rest of the world and their adopted city It's about one man Alik and his relationships with his Russian friends in particular four women who attend his sickbed during the last few days of his life The novel is in part about the women their differences their different relationships with this charismatic man but it's also about being an migrant Ulitskaya describes with subtlety and perception the struggle and sometimes the resistance in becoming a fully fledged immigrant the almost brutal act of finally rejecting home The novel deals with this massive subject with a breathtakingly light touch it's so plausible and poignant while being always wry and funny The novel is set in August 1992 when Russians demonstrate outside the White House in Moscow leading eventually to Gorbachev's removal from power All the visitors to the apartment watch events back home on the TV With an inspiring deftness Ulitskaya reveals the unique place of the migrant the loss of the old the strangeness of the new and the need for and comfort of friendship
