The Anxiety of Autonomy and the Aesthetics of German Orientalism Nicholas A. Germana, 2017 A history of Kantian and post Kantian thought and of a foundational stage of German orientalism German orientalism has been understood variously as a form of latent colonialism as a quest for academic hegemony in Europe and as an effort to diagnose and treat the ills of modern Western culture Nicholas Germana identifies a different impetus for orientalism in German thought seeing it as an effort to come to grips with the Other within German society at the turn of the nineteenth century and within the dynamics of subjectivity itself Drawing largely on work by feminist scholars the book uncovers an anxiety at the core of Kantian and post Kantian thought thus shedding light on its derogation or elevation of Oriental cultures Kant's philosophy of freedom is a construction of modern Western masculinity Reason which alone can make freedom possible subverts and orders chaotic nature and protects the rational subject from the enervating influences of the senses and the imagination The feminized sexually charged Orient is a threat to the historical achievement of Western male rationality Germana's book emphasizes aesthetics in the German orientalist discourse a subject that has received little attention to date In this tradition of German thought aesthetics became a form of spiritual anthropology ordering and classifying societies races and genders in terms of their ability to master the senses and the imagination forces that undermine rational autonomy the very source of human i.e. masculine dignity Nicholas A. Germana is Professor of History at Keene State College New Hampshire

German Orientalism in the Age of Empire Suzanne L. Marchand, 2009-08-17 Nineteenth century studies of the Orient changed European ideas and cultural institutions in more ways than we usually recognize Orientalism certainly contributed to European empire building but it also helped to destroy a narrow Christian classical canon This carefully researched book provides the first synthetic and contextualized study of German Orientalistik a subject of special interest because German scholars were the pace setters in oriental studies between about 1830 and 1930 despite entering the colonial race late and exiting it early The book suggests that we must take seriously German orientalism's origins in Renaissance philology and early modern biblical exegesis and appreciate its modern development in the context of nineteenth and early twentieth century debates about religion and the Bible classical schooling and Germanic origins In ranging across the subdisciplines of Orientalistik German Orientalism in the Age of Empire introduces readers to a host of iconoclastic characters and forgotten debates seeking to demonstrate both the richness of this intriguing field and its indebtedness to the cultural world in which it evolved

Encounters with Islam in German Literature and Culture James R. Hodkinson, Jeffrey Morrison, 2009 German language writings about Islam not only reveal much about Islamic culture but also about the European home culture Islam has been a rich topic in German language literature since the middle ages and the writings about it not only reveal much about Islamic culture but also about the European home culture Many of the early essays in this chronologically arranged volume uncover fresh evidence of how German writers used images of Islam as other to define their individual subject positions as well as to define the German nation and the Christian religion. The perspectives of many contemporary writers are however far removed from such a polar opposition of cultures. Their experience of the German Islamic encounter is complicated by a crucial factor: many of them emerge from Muslim migrant communities such as the German Turkish community. The culturally hybrid origins of these writers and their expression of experiences and ideologies that cross boundaries of East and West Christendom and Islam strongly affect the findings of the essays as the volume moves toward the present. The texts discussed include travelogues and other firsthand encounters with Islam, reports for colonial authorities, aesthetic treatises on Islamic art, literary, essayistic and theological writing on Islamic religious practice, the incorporation of characters, situations and settings from the Islamic world into fiction or drama, and fictional and autobiographical writing by Muslims in Germany.

Orienting the Self Debra N. Prager, 2014. Follows the evolution of the Orient as a positive literary device in German literature and demonstrates how it was used to explore subjectivity and the possibility of wholeness. For centuries Europe's eastward gaze has been wary if not hostile. Medieval man envisaged grotesque beings at the world's edge and scanned the steppes and straits on the immediate horizon for the Asian or Arab hordes that might swarm across them. Through the Crusades, the early modern era and the age of imperialism

Europeans regarded the Eastern subject as requiring both discovery and conquest Conveniently the Oriental came to represent fanaticism terrorism moral laxity and inscrutability among other stereotypes The list of German literary works that reinforced negative clichés about the East is long but Orienting the Self argues for the presence in the German literary tradition of a powerful perception of the East as the scene of desire fantasy and fulfillment It follows the evolution of the Orient as a literary device and demonstrates how it was used to explore subjectivity and the possibility of wholeness The five works treated in this study Parzival Fortunatus Effi Briest Heinrich von Ofterdingen and The Magic Mountain are narratives of development in which the encounter with the East is central to the progression toward selfhood and the promise of fulfillment Debra N Prager is Associate Professor of German at Washington and Lee University German Orientalisms, 2000 Monatshefte, 2019 American Book Publishing Record, 2005 The Orientalist Tom Reiss, 2006-03-14 A thrilling page turner of epic proportions Tom Reiss's panoramic bestseller tells the true story of a Jew who transformed himself into a Muslim prince in Nazi Germany Lev Nussimbaum escaped the Russian Revolution in a camel caravan and as Essad Bey became a celebrated author with the enduring novel Ali and Nino as well as an adventurer a real life Indiana Jones with a fatal secret Reiss pursued Lev's story across ten countries and found himself caught up in encounters as dramatic and surreal and sometimes as heartbreaking as his subject's life the institutional social and political imperatives of the Meiji Buddhist revival movement in Japan and was further determined by the Parliament itself which despite its rhetoric of fostering universal brotherhood and international goodwill was thoroughly permeated with confidence in the superiority of American Protestantism. Additionally in the context of Japan's intensive diplomatic campaign to renegotiate its treaties with Western nations the nature of Japanese religion was not simply a religious issue Snodgrass argues but an integral part of Japan's bid for acceptance by the international community.
