The School-to-Prison Pipeline Catherine Y. Kim, Daniel J. Losen, Damon T. Hewitt, 2010-10-15 An in depth analysis of the legal entry points and remedies in the school to prison pipeline The school to prison pipeline is an emerging trend that pushes large numbers of at risk youth particularly children of color out of classrooms and into the juvenile justice system The policies and practices that contribute to this trend can be seen as a pipeline with many entry points from under resourced K 12 public schools to the over use of zero tolerance suspensions and expulsions and to the explosion of policing and arrests in public schools The confluence of these practices threatens to prepare an entire generation of children for a future of incarceration In this comprehensive study of the relationship between American law and the school to prison pipeline co authors Catherine Y Kim Daniel J Losen and Damon T Hewitt analyze the current state of the law for each entry point on the pipeline and propose legal theories and remedies to challenge them Using specific state based examples and case studies the authors assert that law can be an effective weapon in the struggle to reduce the number of children caught in the pipeline address the devastating consequences of the pipeline on families and communities and ensure that our public schools and juvenile justice system further the goals for which they were created to provide meaningful safe opportunities for all the nation s children
