Gerhardt Knodel:

Gerhardt Knodel Marsha Miro, 2002 The physical origin of Gerhardt Knodel's work is in the grid the basic structure of loom woven textiles and a universally used pattern of organization While the grid locates his art within the textile medium and its historical evolution it also links it to the phenomenon of centering The intersection of horizontal and vertical warp and weft of longitude and latitude creates an internal order that has physical cultural social and architectural meaning used by Knodel in the work Each intersection anticipates the next one and the next reflecting writes Knodel the entire history of weaving as a recreation of the essence of textiles an echo of that first moment of discovery in the construction of a textile Each new intersection returns to that original moment and is a promise of that which is to come To weave is to renew Page 18
