Economic Policy For Growth Economic Development Is Human Development:

Economic Policy for Growth Salim Rashid, 2012-12-06 Economic Development is but one facet of Human Development. This forces us to ask how do humans develop? Man is a social animal and the growth of our humanity requires various social institutions such as bureaucracy. The paradox of capitalism is that it is a system ostensibly based on self interest yet wholly dependent on non market values for its success. These non market values are shaped by two much neglected factors: religion and ethnicity. Economic Development is an applied field whatever it claims as a conclusion should be an applicable conclusion. This requires attention to all those non economic factors which translate economic decisions into practice such as the forces of nationalism versus the pressures of such global powers as US foreign policy and the advice of the IMF/IBRD. Since policy is our goal, theory whose intellectual basis is inaccessible to policy makers or which fails to have application should be minimized. Mathematical models are best avoided and if they are to be used the burden of proof must be placed upon their proponents. As insights about the market are limited neither by time nor space, poor countries can learn from rich ones and vice versa. It is most fruitful to focus on examples of success such as the East Asian economies. They are the clearest illustration of the fact that rapid economic development is possible even to those who have suffered through imperialism and possess few natural resources but have their work and their determination intact. One good example is enough.

Institutions, Human Development and Economic Growth in Transition Economies P. Tridico, 2011-07-19 This book analyses the development path of transition economies in European Countries and former Soviet Republics that have experienced the transformation from planned economies to market economies since the fall of the Berlin wall in 1989. It examines economic growth, institutional change and human development performance. Human Development Report 1996 United Nations Development Programme, 1996. The Human Development Report, now in its seventh edition, updates the unique Human Development Indicators, comparing human development in most countries of the world and the data tables on all aspects of human development. The special focus of this edition is on the important link between economic growth and human development. The Report maintains that the link is not automatic but can be established through proper policy management, arguing the case for initiating and accelerating economic growth and at the same time accelerating and sustaining human development in different parts of the world. The Report also maintains that the quality of growth is as important as its quantity; otherwise growth can be jobless, voiceless, ruthless, rootless and futureless. It identifies employment as an important instrument in translating the benefits of economic growth into people's lives. An indispensable resource for courses in international development, the Report ranks 174 countries according to the Human Development Index (HDI). It also gives the global ranking of more than 100 countries in terms of Gender Related Development Index (GDI) and the Gender Empowerment Measure (GEM). The first index represents HDI taking into account gender inequality in capabilities and the second represents female opportunities in selected economic and political areas. New to this edition is the Capability Poverty

Measure CPM which is used as an alternative to the traditional income poverty measure The Report concludes that the future challenge is how to forge and sustain the desired kind of linkage between economic growth and human development in a globalized world which represents both opportunities and threats for the nations of the world Sociology of Culture, Growth and Economic Policy Panagiotis E. Petrakis, 2014-02-17 It is a wide spread belief that the cultural background inherited in a society affects the requirements of economic development This relationship requires theoretical and empirical justification The present book provides this together with an analysis of the development of cultural background itself Cultural background is embodied in political institutions in transactions knowledge incentives in social capital even in the tangibles of the economy Thus economic development is shaped and the rate of growth is affected Conversely economic development affects cultural background When this interaction takes place at a non developmental cultural background level which is associated with low growth rates then a growth trap is formed Within such a growth trap economic policy public and monetary is relatively deactivated and the conditions influencing the change in cultural background and its timing are of primary importance
