Inflammation in Health and Disease Christopher D. Gregory, Will Wood, Kodi Ravichandran, 2025-09-26 It has long been known that the host responses to apoptosis especially those that govern inflammation and immunity lie at the heart of many normal physiological processes in multiple organ systems That such responses are likely to play key roles in the pathophysiology of many disease states has become increasingly clear The capacity of apoptosis to influence tissue microenvironments and produce systemic effects in addition to the relevance of other cell death processes including necroptosis pyroptosis and ferroptosis has many implications for regulating inflammatory mechanisms This book provides a diverse exploration of molecular cellular and organismal responses to dying cells and offers new perspectives on the roles of apoptosis and other cell death programs in the regulation of inflammation in normal physiological processes and in disease states The different chapters written by top researchers in their respective fields emphasize the responses to cell death and how the underlying mechanisms of cell death programs are coupled to those responses This is a unique and timely resource for researchers scientists and students in the biomedical sciences Colour Atlas of Wounds and Wounding G.A.

Immunogenic Cell Death in Cancer: From Benchside Research to Bedside Reality Abhishek D Garg,Patrizia Agostinis,2016-04-29 Classically anti cancer therapies have always been applied with the primary aim of tumor debulking achieved through widespread induction of cancer cell death While the role of host immune system is frequently considered as host protective in various antigen bearing pathologies or infections yet in case of cancer overtime it was proposed that the host immune system either plays no role in therapeutic efficacy or plays a limited role that is therapeutically unemployable The concept that the immune system is dispensable for the efficacy of anticancer therapies lingered on for a substantial amount of time not only because evidence supporting the claim that anti cancer immunity played a role were mainly contradictory but also largely because it was considered acceptable and sometimes still is to test anticancer therapies in immunodeficient mice i e SCID athymic mice lacking adaptive immune system This latter practice played a detrimental role in appreciating the role of anticancer immunity in cancer therapy This scenario is epitomized by the fact that for a long time the very existence of cancer associated antigens or cancer associated danger signaling remained controversial However over last several years this dogmatic view has been considerably modified The existence of cancer associated antigens and danger signaling has been proven to be incontrovertible These developments have together paved way for the establishment of the attractive concept of immunogenic cell death ICD It has been established that a restricted class of chemotherapeutics targeted therapeutics radiotherapy photodynamic therapy and certain oncolytic viruses can induce a form of cancer cell death called ICD which is accompanied by spatiotemporally defined emission of danger signals These danger signals along with other factors help cancer cells undergoing ICD to activate host innate immune cells which in turn activate T cell based immunity that helps eradicate live or residual surviving cancer cells The emergence of ICD has been marred by some controversy ICD has been criticized to be either experimental model or setting specific or mostly a concept based on rodent studies that may have very limited implications for clinical application However in recent times it has emerged through mainly retrospective or prognostic studies that ICD can work in various human clinical settings hinting towards clinical applicability of ICD However a widespread consensus on this issue is still transitional In the current Research Topic we aimed to organize and intensify a discussion that strives to bring together the academic and clinical research community in order to provide a background to the current state of the art in ICD associated bench side research and to initiate fruitful discussions on present and future prospects of ICD translating towards the clinical bedside reality

Death, Resurrection, and Transporter Beams Silas N. Langley, 2014-08-22 What has Star Trek to do with eternal life It provides the perfect metaphor for understanding the main Christian views concerning what happens to us when we die In this book Silas Langley uses the Star Trek transporter beam to explain five main Christian views about life after death Each of us lives with some personal answer to the universal question of what comes after death Even among Christians views differ as to what exactly happens when we die Meanwhile the modern secular world increasingly challenges the possibility of life after death How can we live again after we die if much of science and philosophy suggests that all that we are dies with our bodies This book shows how each of these views responds to these challenges Death Resurrection and Transporter Beams sorts out these disagreements and their biblical grounding These differences matter since they bear on who we are and how we are to live our lives Readers will come away with a clearer understanding of their own beliefs on this topic and with tools to enter into dialogue with people whose beliefs differ
