Child Welfare and Child Well-Being Mary Bruce Webb, 2010 The landmark National Survey of Child and Adolescent Well Being NSCAW study represents the first effort to gather nationally representative data based on first hand reports about the well being of children and families who encounter the child welfare system NSCAW s findings offer an unprecedented national source of data that describe the developmental status and functional characteristics of children who come to the attention of child protective services Much more than a simple history of placements or length of stay in foster care NSCAW data chart the trajectory of families across service pathways for a multi dimensional view of their specific needs The NSCAW survey is longitudinal contains direct assessments and reports about each child from multiple sources and is designed to address questions of relations among children s characteristics and experiences their development their pathways through the child welfare service system their service needs their service receipt and ultimately their well being over time The chapters in this rich synthesis of NSCAW data represent thoughtful and increasingly sophisticated approaches to the problems highlighted in the study and in child welfare research in general The authors capitalize on the longitudinal multidimensional data to capture the experiences of children and families from the time they are investigated by CPS through multiple follow up points and to consider the interdependent nature of the traditional child welfare outcomes of safety

permanence and well being The topics covered not only are critical to child welfare practice and policy but also are of compelling interest to other child service sectors such as health mental health education and juvenile justice The authors of chapters in this volume are esteemed researchers within psychology social work economics and public health Together they represent the future of child welfare research showcasing the potential of NSCAW as a valuable resource to the research community and providing glimpses of how the data can be used to inform practice and policy

Re-Visioning Public Health Approaches for Protecting Children Bob Lonne, Deb Scott, Daryl Higgins, Todd I. Herrenkohl, 2019-04-26 This volume provides readers around the globe with a focused and comprehensive examination of how to prevent and respond to child maltreatment using evidence informed public health approaches and programs that meet the needs of vulnerable children and struggling families and communities It outlines the system failures of contemporary forensically driven child protection practice Detailed guidance is provided about how to re think earlier intervention strategies and establish stronger and more effective programs and services that prevent maltreatment at the population level Service user and stakeholder perspectives particularly from marginalized groups including Indigenous peoples highlight how public health approaches can better support families and keep children safe Case studies from different countries grapple with the fraught nature of large system change and the various strategies needed to effect multi level reforms Presenting the reader with an array of innovative services used in different institutional and community context this volume confronts the complex challenges found in implementing successful prevention programs that are aligned with diverse cultural and political environments and community expectations

Child Welfare Congressional Research Congressional Research Service, 2015-06-22 Approximately 641 000 children spend some time in foster care each year Most enter care because they have experienced neglect or abuse by their parents Between 35% and 60% of children entering foster care have at least one chronic or acute physical health condition that needs treatment As many as one half to three fourths show behavioral or social competency problems that may warrant mental health services A national survey of children adopted from foster care found that 54% had special health care needs Research on youth who aged out of foster care shows these young adults are more likely than their peers to report having a health condition that limits their daily activities and to participate in psychological and substance abuse counseling

Changing the Odds for Vulnerable Children Building Opportunities and Resilience OECD, 2019-11-19 This report analyses the individual and environmental factors that contribute to child vulnerability It calls on OECD countries to develop and implement cross cutting well being strategies that focus on empowering vulnerable families strengthening children s emotional and social skills strengthening child protection improving children s health and educational outcomes and reducing child poverty and material deprivation
