

The Varieties of Religious Experience by W. James

Topic: Religion | Words: 295 | Pages: 1

People are usually concerned about the surrounding phenomena and events influencing their lives. James (2009) describes the most common questions related to the nature of history and the meaning of its importance. The answers can be diverse as every individual has specific beliefs and unique experiences. Religion usually consists of these two questions, and some people think the Bible is the founder of the spiritual aspect of human life (James, 2009). This source can ensure people that they should stay ethical and value the thoughts of others. Grudem (2022) shows that the Bible suggests that people should study the whole life and religions guides in this process. Some individuals prefer to stay away from religion and avoid spiritual traditions and beliefs, but it is important to be able to accept different opinions and avoid judgments.

The religious experience shows the level of intellect and the nature of the concept. Educated people always respect their surroundings' moral differences and do not try to change their minds. It is crucial to get rid of the cool blood as it may harm society. When this step is followed, religious people should know how to express sympathy but be less intrusive. Non-religious people can be affected by the condemnation from strangers, and by staying prepared for unpredictable situations, the level of negativity can be decreased. James (2009) shows a specific example of the fashion industry where clothes strongly connect with human sexual life. The appearance of the person can show their personality, that is why people in the past did not have extraordinary outfits that caught the attention of other people in the street or specific

The Varieties of Religious Experience William James, 2014-12-01 The Varieties of Religious Experience A Study in Human Nature is a book by Harvard University psychologist and philosopher William James It comprises his edited Gifford Lectures on natural theology which were delivered at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland in 1901 and 1902 The lectures concerned the nature of religion and the neglect of science in the academic study of religion in James view Soon after its publication the book entered the canon of psychology and philosophy and has remained in print for over a century Keywords religion christianity christ church classic The Varieties of Religious Experience William James, 2000-11-01 Selected by the Modern Library as one of the 100 best nonfiction books of all time The Varieties of Religious Experience is certainly the most notable of all books in the field of the psychology of religion and probably destined to be the most influential one written on religion in the twentieth century said Walter Houston Clark in Psychology Today The book was an immediate bestseller upon its publication in June 1902 Reflecting the pluralistic views of psychologist turned philosopher William James it posits that individual religious experiences rather than the tenets of organized religions form the backbone of religious life James s discussion of conversion repentance mysticism and hopes of reward and fears of punishment in the hereafter as well as his observations on the religious experiences of such diverse thinkers as Voltaire Whitman Emerson Luther Tolstoy and others all support his thesis James characteristic humor his ability to put down the pretentious and to be unpretentious and his willingness to take some risks in his choices of anecdotal data or provocative theories are all apparent in the book noted Professor Martin E Marry A reader will come away with more reasons to raise new questions than to feel that old ones have been resolved The Varieties of Religious Experience William James, 1920 The Varieties of Religious Experience William James, 2005-05-01 The Varieties of Religious Experience ILLUSTRATED William James, 2020-03-15 The Varieties of Religious Experience A Study in Human Nature is a book by Harvard University psychologist and philosopher William James It comprises his edited Gifford Lectures on natural theology which were delivered at the University of Edinburgh Scotland between 1901 and 1902 The lectures concerned the psychological study of individual private religious experiences and mysticism and used a range of examples to identify commonalities in religious experiences across traditions Soon after its publication Varieties entered the Western canon of psychology and philosophy and has remained in print for over a century James later developed his philosophy of pragmatism There are many overlapping ideas in Varieties and his 1907 book Pragmatism he book has 14 chapters covering twenty lectures and a postscript Lecture I Religion and Neurology In this first lecture James outlines the scope of his investigation Neither a theologian nor a historian of religion James states that he is a psychologist and therefore his lectures will concern the psychology of religious feelings rather than the institutions of religion This further limits his enquiry to religious phenomena that have been articulated and recorded by individuals limiting his study to either modern writers or sources from history which have become classic texts James then distinguishes between questions concerning something's origin and its value insisting that his purpose is to understand the origin of religious experiences and not to pass judgement on their value This means that if James finds some material or natural cause of religious experience in his study this should not lead anyone to conclude that this undermines their religious or spiritual value Lecture II Circumscription of the Topic In his circumscription of the topic James outlines how he will define religion for the sake of the lectures Religious institutions are found wanting in this regard since they are not primary but rather depend on the private religious feeling of individuals especially those of the founders of such institutions James thus defines the essence of religion as the feelings acts and experiences of individual men in their solitude so far as they apprehend themselves to stand in relation to whatever they may consider divine 3 He then distinguishes religion from moral or philosophical systems such as Stoicism which also teach a particular way of living arguing that religion is distinguished by the presence of a sentiment which gladly assents to it Religion is thus that which combines a moral system with a particular positive sentiment Lecture III The Reality of the Unseen James begins his third lecture by noting that all states of mind involve some kind of object but that religious experiences involve an object which cannot be sensibly perceived This ability to be aware of insensible objects in the mind such as being aware of a presence in the room is an ability particular to human beings These experiences are sometimes connected with religion but not always and James insists that they are not at all unusual For those who have had such experiences they are irrefutable and no rational argument will dissuade someone of their reality even if the subject cannot explain or answer for the experience themselves However James criticises the rationalistic and scientific approaches which would question these experiences as being rarely convincing in the sphere of religion rational arguments about religion are compelling for someone only if they already believe the conclusion This is just a fact of human psychology for James not a value judgement humans are more persuaded irrationally and emotionally than they are by reasons James concludes his lecture by noting the different kinds of responses such experiences can elicit joy and sorrow the variation of which will occupy his following lectures
