Rebecca Berke Galembo, 2017-12-26 The Mexico Guatemala border has emerged as a geopolitical hotspot of illicit flows of both goods and people Contraband Corridor seeks to understand the border from the perspective of its long term inhabitants including petty smugglers of corn clothing and coffee Challenging assumptions regarding security trade and illegality Rebecca Berke Galembo details how these residents engage in and justify extralegal practices in the context of heightened border security restricted economic opportunities and exclusionary trade policies Rather than assuming that extralegal activities necessarily threaten the state and formal economy Galembo's ethnography illustrates the complex ways that the formal informal legal and illegal economies intertwine Smuggling basic commodities across the border provides a means for borderland peasants to make a living while neoliberal economic policies decimate agricultural livelihoods Yet smuggling also exacerbates prevailing inequalities obstructs the possibility of more substantive political and economic change and provides low risk economic benefits to businesses state agents and other illicit actors often at the expense of border residents Galembo argues that securitized neoliberalism values certain economic activities and actors while excluding and criminalizing others even when the informal and illicit economy is increasingly one of the poor's only remaining options Contraband Corridor contends that security neoliberalism and illegality are interdependent in complex ways yet how they unfold depends on negotiations between diverse border actors

Walking Together Alejandra Díaz de León, 2023-04-25 Migration through Mexico is violent and uncertain yet in Walking Together we see how this experience bonds some people together like family even though they may not have started that way before the journey Migrants in transit form several types of social networks develop trust and engage in acts of solidarity The need to be recognized and grieved compounded by the practical use of pooling information and resources leads migrants to form small strong groups called road families Through the generalized sharing of information and small items such as food and blankets migrants also form a transient community that includes everyone on the road at the same time Sociologist Alejandra Díaz de León shows the trajectories of families that left together showing surprisingly that families might not be the best social arrangement in transit Drawing on multisited research this work contributes to debates on the role of social networks in clandestine migration processes and to discussions on how people create social networks and trust under violent and stressful situations The detailed ethnographic narratives and accessible writing weave together theory with empirical observations to highlight and humanize the migrant experience Sitting at the intersection of border studies immigration studies and Latinx studies this concise volume shows how Central American migrants in transit through Mexico survive the precarious and unpredictable road by forming different types of social ties
