The Postsouthern Sense of Place in Contemporary Fiction Martyn Bone, 2014-01-13 For generations southern novelists and critics have grappled with a concept that is widely seen as a trademark of their literature a strong attachment to geography or a sense of place In the 1930s the Agrarians accorded special meaning to rural life particularly the farm in their definitions of southern identity For them the South seemed an organic and rooted region in contrast to the North where real estate development and urban sprawl evoked a faceless raw capitalism By the end of the twentieth century however economic and social forces had converged to create a modernized South How have writers responded to this phenomenon Is there still a sense of place in the South or perhaps a distinctly postsouthern sense of place Martyn Bone innovatively draws upon postmodern thinking to consider the various perspectives that southern writers have brought to the concept of place and to look at its fate in a national and global context He begins with a revisionist assessment of the Agrarians who failed in their attempts to turn their proprietary ideal of the small farm into actual policy but whose broader rural aesthetic lived on in the work of neo Agrarian writers including William Faulkner and Eudora Welty By the 1950s adherence to this aesthetic was causing southern writers and critics to lose sight of the social reality of a changing South Bone turns to more recent works that do respond to the impact of capitalist spatial development on the South and on the nation generally including that self declared international city Atlanta Close readings of novels by Robert Penn Warren Walker Percy Richard Ford Anne Rivers Siddons Tom Wolfe and Toni Cade Bambara illuminate evolving ideas about capital land labor and class while introducing southern literary studies into wider debates around social cultural and literary geography Bone concludes his remarkably rich book by considering works of Harry Crews and Barbara Kingsolver that suggest the southern sense of place may be not only post Agrarian or postsouthern but also transnational

Books and Pamphlets, Including Serials and Contributions to Periodicals Library of Congress. Copyright Office,1949 The Green Book Magazine ,1909 Wingless Chickens, Bayou Catholics, and Pilgrim Wayfarers L. Lamar Nisly,2011 Flannery O Connor Tim Gautreaux and Walker Percy are all Catholic writers from the South and seem to embody very fully both parts of that label Yet as quickly becomes clear in their writing their fiction employs markedly different tones and modes of addressing their audience O Connor seems intent on shocking her reader whom she anticipates will be hostile to her deepest beliefs Gautreaux gently and humorously engages his reader inviting his expected sympathetic audience to embrace the characters needed moral growth Percy satirically lampoons an array of social ills and failings in the Church as he tries to get his audience laughing with him while he makes his deadly serious point about the flaws he finds in the church and larger culture Why do these three writers assume such divergent images of their audience Why do texts by three writers who each embrace their Southern locale and their Catholic beliefs seem to have so little in common To answer these questions Nisly helps readers understand these authors fiction by examining the role that place and time had in shaping each author s idea of an audience and by extension his or her manner of addressing that audience More specifically Nisly focuses on each author s experience of Catholic community and each author s placement in relation to the Second Vatican Council Linking together biographical information and a reading of their fiction Nisly argues that O Connor s Gautreaux s and Percy s sense of audience has been shaped in significant ways by each author s own local experience of Catholicism in his or her home region as well as the larger global changes of Vatican II that transformed Roman Catholicism The Story of the 180th Infantry Regiment George A.
