1. PROJECTS, THE CATERING ROLE OF DEVELOPMENT

Projects are all-purpose agents of development. Perhaps the most obvious danger of project proliferation is the virtual abandonment of long-term, continuous implementation of development programs. Indeed, the very idea of a development project is problematic.

Project preparation is almost identical with, or even is, preparation of development in planning. Development is a continuous, dynamic process, involving growth, change, transformation, development, economic policy, political, and administrative structures, and all other development-related activities. Indeed, project preparation is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process.

It is a danger, therefore, that project preparation will become a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process.

What is a Project?

In the United States, the word "project" is used in a variety of contexts. It is used in the context of development, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process. Indeed, the development process is a process of development in itself, and is almost identical to the development process.
