

Anatomy

They have excellent night vision and can see 6 times better than a human.

Their small rounded ears have a prominent white spot on the back. This creates the illusion of a tiger having "eyes" on the back of their head, which makes them look alert from behind and discourages other predators from attacking. These eye-like spots are called eyespots.

Their large paws have retractable claws and are webbed in between, which aid their love of swimming in ponds and lakes to cool off during hot periods of the day. Their agile body and strong muscles can carry them in a single leap more than 30 feet.

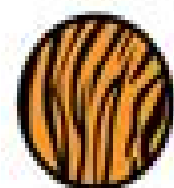

Most canines have 43 teeth, whereas tigers have only 30.

Sharp canines ensure both and precise kills during hunting and their rough tongue can strip meat close to the bone and help with grooming.

Their long whiskers are very sensitive to the touch and help them navigate in the darkness when they are hunting.

A tiger's unique stripe pattern helps them to camouflage and break up their body shape, an important tool during hunting as it makes striking prey easier.

Tigers are the largest member of the Felidae family. They also set themselves apart with their unique coat, as stripes are rarely found in other felines. Their coat ranges from shades of orange to brown and rarely seen white. All white Bengal tigers are captives that have been bred from one male tiger that was captured in the 1960s.

The color of the white tiger's fur is the result of a genetic mutation called leucism, they are NOT an endangered species. Tiger's distinct black stripes can also be seen when they are bald, as the stripes are found on their skin as well as their fur.
