Giving Our Children a Fighting Chance

Susan B. Neuman, Donna Celano, 2012-08-24 This is an eye opening portrait of two communities in Philadelphia with drastically different economic resources Over the course of their 10 year investigation the authors came to understand that this disparity between affluence and poverty has created a knowledge gap far more important than mere achievement scores with serious implications for students economic prosperity and social mobility At the heart of this knowledge gap is the limited ability of students from poor communities to develop information capital This book provides powerful insights into the role that literacy can play in giving low income students a fighting chance Giving Our Children a Fighting Chance documents how inequalities begin early and are reinforced by geographic concentration compares community libraries to see how print is used in each neighbourhood and how children develop as young readers looks at patterns that create radical differences in experiences and attitudes toward learning prior to entering school explores the function of technology as a tool that exacerbates the divide between affluent students and those with limited access to information and provides a comprehensive analysis of community literacy documenting the transformation of media habits from books to computers

Opportunity and Performance Sam Redding, Linda Cavazos, Allison Layland, Janet Twyman, Bi Vuong, 2021-07-01 Because everyone from policymakers to classroom teachers has a role in achieving greater equity for children from poverty this book provides a sweeping chronicle of the historical turning points judicial legislative and regulatory on the road to greater equity as background to the situation today It provides succinct policy recommendations for states and districts as well as practical curricular and instructional strategies for districts schools and teachers This comprehensive approach from the statehouse to the classroom for providing children who come to school from impoverished environments with the education in which they thrive not merely one that is comparable to others truly enlists everyone in the quest for opportunity and performance The next step toward equity may be taken by a governor but it may also be taken by a teacher One need not wait for the other

Teaching with Poverty in Mind Eric Jensen,2010-06-16 In Teaching with Poverty in Mind What Being Poor Does to Kids Brains and What Schools Can Do About It veteran educator and brain expert Eric Jensen takes an unflinching look at how poverty hurts children families and communities across the United States and demonstrates how schools can improve the academic achievement and life readiness of economically disadvantaged students Jensen argues that although chronic exposure to poverty can result in detrimental changes to the brain the brain s very ability to adapt from experience means that poor children can also experience emotional social and academic success A brain that is susceptible to adverse environmental effects is equally susceptible to the positive effects of rich balanced learning environments and caring relationships that build students resilience self esteem and character Drawing from research experience and real school success stories Teaching with Poverty in Mind reveals What poverty is and how it affects students in school What drives change both at the macro level within schools and districts and at the micro level inside a student s brain Effective strategies from those who have succeeded and ways to replicate those best practices at your own school and How to engage the resources necessary to make change happen Too often we talk about change while maintaining a culture of excuses We can do better Although no magic bullet can offset the grave challenges faced daily by disadvantaged children this timely resource shines a spotlight on what matters most providing an inspiring and practical guide for enriching the minds and lives of all your students

Education for the End of Poverty Matthew Clarke,2007 This book provides important information regarding the Millennium Development Goals adopted unanimously by the United Nations in 2000 setting explicit targets in terms of achieving progress in the developing world This volume provides both a theoretical overview of the role of education in development and also illustrates this with various case studies based on work of non government organisations and other donors in the Asia Pacific region The authors include a mix of development practitioners as well as academics engaged in research in this field Thus the theory is illustrated and extrapolated by case studies focussing on community development interventions
