Abstract— Emotion in mentally retarded people has been assumed to be no more than emotional disturbance and this has been equated with psychiatric disorder. Consideration of recent research and theory in emotion strongly suggests that there are two approaches which are particularly applicable to the study of mental retardation. In this paper, a comparative study of mentally retarded person's expressions like their facial expressions, speech and body gestures with normal persons. The model proposed in this approach is a multimodal emotion recognition using a Bayesian classifier, using a multimodal corpus with four emotions.

Keywords— Affective body language, Affective speech, Emotion recognition, Multimodal fusion.

I. INTRODUCTION

One of the challenging issues is to endow a machine with an emotional intelligence. Emotionally intelligent systems must be able to create an affective interaction with users; they must be endowed with the ability to perceive, interpret, express and regulate emotions [1]. The recent research suggests that there are two approaches which are particularly applicable to the study of mental retardation. studies from the psychology show the need to consider the integration of different non-verbal behaviour modalities in the human-human communication [2].

In this paper, a comparative study of mentally retarded person's expressions with normal persons and a multimodal approach has been attempted to recognize emotions of mentally challenged person's from their facial expressions, speech and body gestures. The model proposed in this approach is using a Bayesian classifier, using a multimodal corpus with four emotions. In face feature extraction method, feature extraction is performed for eyes, eyebrows, mouths and nose using multi-cue approach. Feature masks generated for each facial feature are fused together to produce a final mask along with confidence level estimation. In speech feature extraction method, the set of features that contains features based on intensity, pitch, MFCC, Bark spectral bands, voiced segment characteristics and pause length.

The method is considered 32 features like maximum, mean and minimum values, sample moment, standard deviation and variance. In body feature extraction method, tracking of body and hands of the subjects is done using the EyesWeb platform. Starting from the silhouette and the hands of the actors, five main expressive motion cues using Eyes Web Expressive Gesture Processing Library is extracted. In order to compare the results of the unimodal and the multimodal systems, a common approach based on a Bayesian classifier (BayesNet) provided by the software Weka, a free toolbox containing a collection of machine learning algorithms for data mining tasks is used.

II. LITERATURE SURVEY

A. "Multimodal Emotion Recognition in Speech-based Interaction Using Facial Expression, Body Gesture and Acoustic Analysis" by Loic Kessous, Ginevra Castellano and George Caridakis

In this paper, a study on multimodal automatic emotion recognition during a speech-based interaction is presented. A database was constructed consisting of people pronouncing a sentence in a scenario where they interacted with an agent using speech. The authors chooses Ten people, who pronounced a sentence corresponding to a command while making 8 different emotional expressions.

A multimodal approach for the recognition of eight acted emotional states (Anger, Despair, Interest, Pleasure, Sadness, Irritation, Joy and Pride) was presented. The approach integrates information from facial expressions, body gesture and speech. A model with a Bayesian classifier was trained and tested, using a multimodal corpus with ten subjects, collected during the Third Summer School of the UMAINE EU-IST project, held in Genova in September 2006.

The recording procedure was based on that of the GEMEP corpus [3], a multimodal collection of portrayed emotional expressions. Data on facial expressions, body movement and gestures and speech was simultaneously recorded. Ten participants from the summer school, distributed as evenly as possible concerning their gender, participated in the

Retardation Anton Do en,Kenneth Day,2008-08-13 Since the 1970s the development of normalization philosophy and the implementation of community care policies have highlighted the nature and treatment of psychiatric and behavior disorders in people with mental retardation and rekindled the interest of scientists psychiatric practitioners and service providers With these changes has grown a substantial body of new research and information on the phenomenology epidemiology classification and clinical features of mental illness and behavior disorders in mentally retarded persons In response to this growing interest and awareness the editors together with internationally renowned contributors from the United States and Europe have compiled the first comprehensive handbook of the current theory and practice of mental health treatment and care in mentally retarded children and adults Both contemporary and in depth this multidisciplinary multidimensional volume covers all available therapeutic methods including psychopharmacotherapy psychotherapy behavior therapies cognitive therapy and the systems approach for all the main diagnostic disorders in people with mental retardation Parts I and II present an overview of epidemiology and clinical presentation including research trends and therapeutic methods including psychotherapy psychopharmacology behavioral therapies cognitive and social learning treatments and working with families and caregivers Parts III and IV focus on psychotherapeutic interventions such as rational emotive group treatment with dually diagnosed adults pre therapy for persons with mental retardation who are also psychotic and systemic therapy and how to apply these methods to the treatment of specific mental illnesses such as schizophrenia epilepsy and mood and anxiety disorders Parts V and VI discuss how to treat behavior disorders such as aggression self aggression pharmacotherapy and strategic behavioral interventions and self injurious behaviors multimodal contextual approach including group therapy for sex offenders and a pedagogical approach to behavior problems and which treatment methods such as psychodynamically oriented psychotherapy and pharmacotherapy are most effective with children including developmental dynamic relationship therapy with more severely mentally retarded children Parts VII and VIII provide guidance on mental health services and staff training including psychiatric treatment in community care and a model for inpatient services for mentally ill persons with mental retardation and the editors final chapter which draws together all the various therapeutic approaches described in previous chapters to provide a practical framework for an integrative approach Filling a major gap in the literature this indispensable resource for psychiatrists psychologists and educators working with mentally retarded persons is also intended for general practitioners doctors social workers and therapists working in the same or related fields Comprehensive Handbook of Psychopathology Henry E. Adams,2013-12-18 The major purpose of this handbook is to provide a comprehensive review of current clinical descriptions research and theories of psychopathology Descriptive psychopathology is a field that is the foundation of clinical practice and research in clinical psychology psychiatry psychiatric social work psychiatric nursing and allied professions in mental health Psychopathology is often perceived as a stepchild of the more glamorous areas of diagnosis or assessment and therapy or behavioral change Nevertheless it is doubtful that any meaningful advancements in these areas will occur until there is a thorough understanding of the behavioral disorders The purpose of the present project was to devise a handbook that covered both general and specific topics in psychopathology and that would be useful to researchers practitioners and graduate or other advanced students in the mental health professions In order to implement this plan we selected very carefully colleagues whom we respect for their expertise in particular fields These include both clinicians and researchers with outstanding national reputations as well as more junior behavioral scientists and clinicians who in our opinion will achieve similar recognition in the future The chapters in this book lead us to believe that we have chosen wisely We would like to express our appreciation to these authors for their outstanding contributions and cooperation
