Human Transactions Gary Stahl, 1995 Given the evolutionary and developmental processes that form a human being can we plausibly believe that people can make rational and autonomous choices about their lives How can such choices be non arbitrary and compelling if there are no norms outside the historical process against which they can be judged And if that historical process is simply an accidental episode in an indifferent universe what sorts of meanings can individual lives and choices have The Storied Nature of Human Life Karl E. Scheibe, Frank J. Barrett, 2017-10-23 This book sheds new light on the life and the influence of one of the most significant critical thinkers in psychology of the last century Theodore R Sarbin 1911 2005 In the first section authors provide a comprehensive account of Sarbin s life and career The second section consists in a collection of ten publications from the last two decades of his career The essays cover topics such as the adoption of contextualism as the appropriate world view for psychology the establishment of narrative psychology as a major mode of inquiry and the rejection both mechanism and mentalism as suitable approaches for psychology The book is historically informed and yet focused on the future of psychological theory and practice It will engage researches and scholars in psychology social scientists and philosophers as well general readership interested in exploring Sarbin s theories A Moral Ontology for a Theistic Ethic Frank G. Kirkpatrick, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2003 This book develops a moral ontology for a theistic ethic that engages the work of contemporary moral and political philosophers and reaffirms the relevance of a theistic tradition of God s relation to the world reflected in the fundamental teachings of Judaism Christianity and Islam Drawing on recent thought in the non religious fields of psychology and political and moral philosophy which build around the concept of human flourishing in community Kirkpatrick argues that a theistic ethic need not be the captive of parochial or sectarian theological camps He proposes a common or universal ethic that transcends the fashionable ethnocentric incommensurate differences in morality alleged by many post modern deconstructionists In the wake of ethnic religious strife post September 11th 2001 this book argues for a common morality built on the inclusivity of love community and justice that can transcend sectarian and parochial boundaries What Develops in Emotional Development? Michael F. Mascolo, Sharon Griffin, 2013-11-22 The problem of development is central in the study of emotional life for two basic reasons First emotional life so clearly changes dramatically in the early years with new emotional reactions emerging against the backdrop of an increasing sensitivity to context and with self regulation of emotion emerging from a striking dependence on regulatory assistance from caregivers Such changes demand developmental analysis At the same time understanding such profound changes will surely inform our understanding of the nature of development more generally The complexity of emotional change when grasped will reveal the elusive nature of development itself At the outset we know that development is complex We must take seriously what is present at any given phase including the newborn period because a developmental analysis disallows something emerging from nothing Still it is equally nondevelopmental to posit that new forms of new processes were simply present in their precursors Rather development is characterized by transformations in which more complex structures and organization emerge from new integration of prior components and new capacities These new forms and organizations cannot be specified from prior conditions but are due to transactions of the evolving organism with its environment over time They are not simply in the genome and they are not simply conditioned by the environment They are the result of the developmental process

Feeling Power Megan Boler, 2004-11-23 First published in 1999 Megan Boler combines cultural history with ethical and multicultural analyses to explore how emotions have been disciplined suppressed or ignored at all levels of education and in educational theory FEELING POWER charts the philosophies and practices developed over the last century to control social conflicts arising from gender class and race The book traces the development of progressive pedagogies from civil rights and feminist movements to Boler's own recent studies of emotional intelligence and emotional literacy Drawing on the formulation of emotion as knowledge within feminist psychobiological and post structuralist theories Boler develops a unique theory of emotion missing from contemporary educational discourses

Not Passion's Slave Robert C. Solomon, 2003-01-30 The idea that we are in some significant sense responsible for our emotions is an idea that Robert Solomon has developed for almost three decades Here in a single volume he traces the development of this theory of emotions and elaborates it in detail Two themes run through his work the first presents a cognitive theory of emotions in which emotions are construed primarily as evaluative judgments The second proposes an existentialist perspective in which he defends the idea that as we are responsible for our emotions Indeed sometimes it even makes sense to say that we choose them While the first claim has gained increasing currency in the literature his claim about responsibility for emotions has continued to meet with considerable resistance and misinterpretation The new emphasis on evolutionary biology and neurology has mistakenly reinforced the popular prejudice that emotions happen to us and are entirely beyond our control This volume is also a kind of intellectual memoir of Solomon's own development as a thinker The essays written in the 1980s elaborate the themes of the intentionality of emotion and the claim that emotions are judgments in this period he is also increasingly preoccupied with how emotions vary and are identified in a variety of cultures In the 1990s his interests evolve to consider the social and political role of emotions and theories about emotion The final section presents his current philosophical position on the seeming passivity of the passions Despite his own critical assessment of his earlier work he continues to argue that in the final analysis we are responsible for our emotions and existential quality of our lives
