The Psychobiology of Emotions Jack George Thompson, 2013-06-29 Regardless of culture most adult humans report experiencing similar feelings such as anger fear humor and joy Such subjective emotional states however are not universal Members of some cultures deny experiencing specific emotions such as fear or grief Moreover within any culture individuals differ widely in their self reports of both the variety and intensity of their emotions Some people report a vivid tapestry of positive and negative emotional experiences Other people report that a single emotion such as depression or fear totally dominates their existences Still others report flat and barren emotional lives Over the past 100 years scientists have proposed numerous rival explanations of why such large individual differences in emotions occur Various authors have offered anthropological biochemical ethological neurological psychological and sociological models of human emotions Indeed the sheer number of competing theories precludes a comprehensive review in a single volume Accordingly only a representative sample of models are discussed in this book and many equally important theories have been omitted These omissions were not intended to prejudice the reader in favor of any particular conceptual frame work Rather this selective coverage was intended to focus attention upon the empirical findings that contemporary theories attempt to explain

Music, Mind, and Brain Manfred Clynes, 2013-06-29 There is much music in our lives yet we know little about its function Music is one of man's most remarkable inventions though possibly it may not be his invention at all like his capacity for language his capacity for music may be a naturally evolved biologic function All cultures and societies have music Music differs from the sounds of speech and from other sounds but only now do we find ourselves at the threshold of being able to find out how our brain processes musical sounds differently from other sounds We are going through an exciting time when these questions and the question of how music moves us are being seriously investigated for the first time from the perspective of the co-ordinated functioning of the organism the perspective of brain function motor function as well as perception and experience There is so much we do not yet know But the roads to that knowledge are being opened and the coming years are likely to see much progress towards providing answers and raising new questions These questions are different from those music theorists have asked themselves they deal not with the structure of a musical score although that knowledge is important and necessary but with music in the flesh music not outside of man to be looked at from written symbols but music man as a living entity or system
