of memory and its revision and erasure in the ninth to eleventh centuries During this period the descendants of the Persian imperial religious and historiographical traditions not only wrote themselves into starkly different early Arabic and Islamic accounts of the past but also systematically suppressed much knowledge about pre Islamic history The result was both a new Persian ethnic identity and the pairing of Islam with other loyalties and affiliations including family locale and sect This pioneering study examines revisions to memory in a wide range of cases from Iran s imperial and administrative heritage to the Prophet Muhammad s stalwart Persian companion Salman al Farisi and to memory of Iranian scholars soldiers and rulers in the mid seventh century

Politics, Law, and Community in Islamic Thought Ovamir Anjum, 2012-03-19 This revisionist account of the history of Islamic political thought from the early to the late medieval period focuses on Ibn Taymiyya one of the most brilliant theologians of his day This original study demonstrates how his influence shed new light on the entire trajectory of Islamic political thought Although he did not reject the Caliphate ideal as is commonly believed he nevertheless radically redefined it by turning it into a rational political institution intended to serve the community umma Through creative reinterpretation he deployed the Quranic concept of fitra divinely endowed human nature to centre the community of believers and its common sense reading of revelation as the highest epistemic authority In this way he subverted the elitism that had become ensconced in classical theological legal and spiritual doctrines and tried to revive the ethico political rather than strictly legal dimension of Islam In reassessing Ibn Taymiyya s work this book marks a major departure from traditional interpretations of medieval Islamic thought
