Nature in the History of Economic Thought Nathaniel Wolloch,2016-10-04 From antiquity to our own time those interested in political economy have with almost no exceptions regarded the natural physical environment as a resource meant for human use Focusing on the period 1600 1850 and paying particular attention to major figures including Adam Smith T R Malthus David Ricardo and J S Mill this book provides a detailed overview of the intellectual history of the economic consideration of nature from antiquity to modern times It shows how even someone like Mill who was clearly influenced by romantic notions regarding the spiritual need for contact with pristine nature ultimately regarded it as an economic resource Building on existing scholarship this study demonstrates how the rise of modern sensitivity to nature from the late eighteenth century in particular was in fact a dialectical reaction to the growing distance of modern urban civilization from the natural environment As such the book offers an unprecedentedly detailed overview of the intellectual history of economic considerations of nature whilst underlining how the history of this topic has been remarkably consistent

Wielding the Ax Thaddeus Sunseri,2014-08-26 Forests have been at the fault lines of contact between African peasant communities in the Tanzanian coastal hinterland and outsiders for almost two centuries In recent decades a global call for biodiversity preservation has been the main challenge to Tanzanians and their forests Thaddeus Sunseri uses the lens of forest history to explore some of the most profound transformations in Tanzania from the nineteenth century to the present He explores anticolonial rebellions the world wars the depression the Cold War oil shocks and nationalism through their intersections with and impacts on Tanzania's coastal forests and woodlands In Wielding the Ax forest history becomes a microcosm of the origins nature and demise of colonial rule in East Africa and of the first fitful decades of independence Wielding the Ax is a story of changing constellations of power over forests beginning with African chiefs and forest spirits both known as ax wielders and ending with international conservation experts who wield scientific knowledge as a means to controlling forest access The modern international concern over tropical deforestation cannot be understood without an awareness of the long term history of these forest struggles

Tropical Nature Guillaume Blanc, Mathieu Guérin, Grégory Quenet, 2025-03-01 Across Africa and South East Asia the impulse to protect nature often dovetails with the domination of local people From mass displacement to severe restrictions on land use and daily acts of violence conservation work risks reproducing Eurocentric modes of colonialism and worsening the effects of the climate crisis In this insightful and wide ranging study of the colonial history of conservation Tropical Nature seeks to provide a much needed history of the Global South from its own perspective Comparing case studies ranging from Ali Bongo's Gabon to the postcolonial African itinerary of the agronomist Arthur Bunting this volume advances a small scale global history that deciphers the relations binding human societies to the non human world

Explorations into Sustainable Development with Forest and Biodiversity Conservation Dr. Ritu Dhingra, 2023-06-02 Forests being the lungs of planet Earth are the most important ecosystems They act as carbon sinks and sustain a huge amount of carbon in them They play an extremely important role for the survival of the living beings on this earth From human beings to the flora and fauna of the earth's ecosystem depend on the forests in some way or the other Forests are the repositories of enormous biodiversity on this planet They are an adobe to millions of species of animals including human beings plants and microorganisms They also give massive ecosystem services to mankind and to all the living beings thriving on this earth They regulate climate water cycles and carbon sequestering on this planet They even provide a livelihood to human beings all over the world They check global warming on this earth The parameter of sustainable development is that forest and biodiversity is conserved for the coming generations also Forests are the most important repositories of terrestrial biological diversity The diversity of life amongst the living beings and their distinct habitats the interactions between the various components of the biodiversity makes this planet a habitable place for various life forms Forest conservation is extremely important for intergenerational equity and the principle of sustainable development paves the way The forests especially in the domains of forestry and agriculture provide 40% of the world's economy This is due to the biological diversity in the forest ecosystems 70% of the world's poor populace who live in rural areas is directly dependent on biodiversity for their livelihood A rough estimate of 60 million indigenous folks are somehow

Consuming Ivory Alexandra Celia Kelly, 2021-05-18 Examines the complex global impact of the ivory trade The economic prosperity of two nineteenth and early twentieth century New England towns rested on factories that manufactured piano keys billiard balls combs and other items made of ivory imported from East Africa Yet while towns like Ivoryton and Deep River Connecticut thrived the African ivory trade left in its wake massive human exploitation and ecological devastation At the same time dynamic East African engagement with capitalism and imperialism took place within these trade histories Drawing from extensive archival and field research in New England Great Britain and Tanzania Alexandra Kelly investigates the complex global legacies of the historical ivory trade She not only explains the complexities of this trade but also analyzes Anglo American narratives about Africa questioning why elephants and ivory feature so centrally in those representations From elephant conservation efforts to the cultural heritage industries in New England and East Africa her study reveals the ongoing global repercussions of the ivory craze and will be of interest to anthropologists archaeologists historians and conservationists

Nature's Spectacle John Sheail, 2014-06-17 National parks have always been an emotive and iconic symbol ever since the first parks of the modern era were created in the mid nineteenth century This book based on original research delves deeply into their character and significance and the larger context in which they developed The book celebrates the deserved attractiveness of the parks as wilderness or spectacle to millions of visitors but also emphasises how there was nothing inevitable self sustaining or without cost in their magnificence and accessibility Those early parks were a powerful unifying force as national playgrounds especially as motor transport democratised their use However they also provoked bitter conflict in their dispossession of local communities and perhaps deliberate segregation of people from scenery and wildlife That first century of national parks which concluded with the significant break of the Second World War and the subsequent development of more international approaches to conservation left an uncertain legacy It was a fragile foundation from which to build what became an integral part of today's conservation movement

Green Victorians Vicky Albritton, Fredrik Albritton Jonsson, 2016-03-07 From Henry David Thoreau to Bill McKibben critics and philosophers have long sought to demonstrate how a sufficient life one without constant environmentally damaging growth might still be rich and satisfying Yet one crucial episode in the history of sufficiency has been largely forgotten Green Victorians tells the story of a circle of men and women in the English Lake District who attempted to create a new kind of economy turning their backs on Victorian consumer society in order to live a life dependent not on material abundance and social prestige but on artful simplicity and the bonds of community At the center of their social experiment was the charismatic art critic and political economist John Ruskin Albritton and Albritton Jonsson show how Ruskin's followers turned his theory into practice in a series of ambitious local projects ranging from hand spinning and woodworking to gardening archaeology and pedagogy This is a lively yet unsettling story for there was a dark side to Ruskin's community as well racist thinking paternalism and technophobia Richly illustrated Green Victorians breaks new ground connecting the ideas and practices of Ruskin's utopian community with the problems of ethical consumption then and now
