Pedagogy as Encounter Naeem Inayatullah, 2022-04-28 What is the role of politics in the classroom How does the desire of the teacher shape the pedagogical process Is teaching possible Is learning possible Pedagogy as Encounter engages with such larger issues The majority of discussions workshops conference panels articles and books avoid meta pedagogical issues by focusing on technique Such technique talk examines schemes methods and procedures that do and do not work in the classroom It answers the how question at the cost of ignoring these bigger queries Pedagogy as Encounter consists of 120 vignettes arranged in eight chapters Most of these are first person autobiographical stories that describe encounters with students and colleagues They portray a teacher whose classroom disappointments lead him to radical experimentation But there are also a few theoretical sections as well as segments that are epigrammatic in nature All of it is grounded in a Lacanian political psychology and in a critical global political economy The theory however remains largely implicit and is confined to the footnotes The body of the text is free of jargon and presented in a conversational voice

What About Us? Edgar D. Johnson,2010-12-01 Over the past three decades the standards based reform movement has transformed K 12 education in the United States culminating with passage of the No Child Left Behind Act in 2002 Beyond making reasonable accommodations for special needs students standards based education pays little attention to other areas of student difference relying instead on a rational actor model of student experience and ignoring how differences in students backgrounds and orientations impact their particular experiences of schooling This book examines the development of standards based education with particular scrutiny of the roles of the National Governors Association and its National Education Summit events Examination of important documents emerging from those events provides an illustration of the conceptually impoverished understanding of student subjectivity motivation and agency inherent in standards based education In order to understand both problems with and alternatives to standards based education the author examines the roles of ideology rhetoric and audience in school policy In three case studies the author analyzes several non school models of education including Marine Corps bootcamp Ving Tsun kung fu training and an online school resistance community Johnson argues that examination of these learning contexts provides a better understanding of the shortcomings and dangers of the standards based model of student subjectivity and suggests a set of fourteen principles to inform the development of more student centered alternatives
