

changing physical activity behavior has been recognized.

Jim Prochaska and his associates have developed a transtheoretical model of behavior change as one attempt to view behavior change in a more dynamic way. This model holds that in making a health-related behavior change, such as changing from a sedentary to an active lifestyle, change proceeds through a series of stages. In addition, individuals use a number of common behavioral and experiential (cognitive) processes in making these changes. Different processes are more useful at different stages. Initial research indicates that interventions to assist individuals to become regularly active will be more effective if they target the processes that are most pertinent to the stage of change of the target group. It appears that such stage-targeted interventions might be particularly useful in working with fairly large populations or institutional groups. At the individual level, a more clinical, in-depth approach is indicated.

SPRANGER, EDUARD (1882-1963). German philosopher, pedagogue, and psychologist. During his professorship of philosophy in Leipzig (1911-1920), Spranger (1914/1928) published an influential monograph on personality psychology and its connection to ethics. As a professor of philosophy and pedagogy in Berlin (1920-1946), he published in 1924 a widely successful developmental treatise on the psychology of young people. Spranger was a prolific and respected writer, not only in psychology, philosophy, and education, but also in political and cultural studies (Spranger, 1969-1980).

Spranger was a student of Wilhelm Dilthey, the German philosopher who emphasized the autonomy of the Geisteswissenschaften ("cultural sciences") against the natural sciences. Spranger, incorporating German classical philosophy (particularly that of G. W. F. Hegel), drew on Dilthey for his elaboration of a geisteswissenschaftliche psychology. Spranger conceptualized a psychological performance as part of a meaningful life totality that requires knowledge and "understanding" of the psychological-mental whole. The term he used, verstehen ("to understand"), does not denote the act of sympathizing with another person, but refers to transcending the immediate consciousness of the individual's psyche and grasping mental structures as meaningful in cultural relations, while providing objectively valid knowledge.

Using a verstehende psychology, Spranger (1914/1928) proposed in his personality psychology six ideally basic types of individuality. Each type fulfills the quality of a Gestalt and corresponds to an ethical system. The theoretical type accords with the ethics of general legality and the value of objectivity; the economic type with utilitarian ethics and the value of utility; the Neighborhood Resilience and Urban Conflict Karina V. Korostelina,2021-10-21 This book explores the resilience in urban neighborhoods affected by chronic conflict and violence developing a new model for improving resilience policies The neighborhood resilience approach is an inclusive form of building positive resilience which recognizes that local communities possess valuable skills and experience of dealing with crises and prioritizes the agency of local communities in the production of knowledge and developing practices The book identifies and describes the repertoire of neighborhood resilience practices organized in four clusters 1 addressing the structure of conflict 2 increasing the effectiveness of external resources 3 enhancing the community capacities and 4 reflecting the dynamics of identity and power in neighborhoods One of the key findings of the book is the nonlinear connections between structure and dynamics of conflict and neighborhood resilience practices represented in the Four Loops Model The concentration on community based practices addresses macro level critiques of neo liberalism in critical resilience studies and encourages rethinking the ways community based indicators might operate in combination with existing macro indicators of resilience The bottom up indicators provide more specific details and essential localized experiences for improving resilience policies at the national level This book will be of much interest to students of conflict resolution resilience urban studies and US politics Aesthetics and Human Resource Development

Stephen Gibb,2006-05-02 The first book to look at both aesthetics and human resource development this timely and original work investigates existing as well as possible future connections and relations between the two areas Well structured and expertly written The Aesthetic Challenges of Human Resource Development is undoubtedly a valuable reference for students of human resource management business and management and aesthetics Networked Sympathy

Linda Walter,2025-01-28 This book proposes a novel approach to human rights work advocating the use of narrative persuasion on social media to realign individual moral judgments with fundamental human rights It challenges the traditional view that human rights are primarily political legal rights proposing instead that they should be understood as moral rights identifying the right not to be harmed as universal fundamental moral right By integrating insights from philosophy social psychology neuroscience and communication studies Linda Walter explores how human rights work can be more effectively carried out on social media The author uses a case study of the social media campaign Jamal al Khatib to examine the impact of narrative persuasion on changing harmful attitudes Through qualitative content analysis she assesses how resistance strategies manifest in the audience s comments and explores the effectiveness of narrative persuasion in overcoming these barriers The findings reveal the complexities of altering deeply held beliefs but also highlight the potential of narrative persuasion to engage and shift individual attitudes toward human rights On the Psychobiology of Personality

Robert M Stelmack,2004-11-12 Zuckerman received his Ph D in psychology from New York University Graduate School of Arts and Science in 1954 with a specialization in clinical psychology After graduation he worked for three years as a clinical psychologist in state hospitals in Norwich Connecticut and Indianapolis Indiana While in the latter position the Institute for Psychiatric Research was opened in the same medical center where he was working as a clinical psychologist He obtained a position there with a joint appointment in the department of psychiatry This was his first interdisciplinary experience with other researchers in psychiatry biochemistry psychopharmacology and psychology His first research areas were personality assessment and the relation between parental attitudes and psychopathology During this time he developed the first real trait state test for affects starting with the Affect Adjective Check List for anxiety and then broadening it to a three factor trait state test including anxiety depression and hostility Multiple Affect Adjective Check List Later positive affect scales were added Toward the end of his years at the institute the first reports of the effects of sensory deprivation appeared and he began his own experiments in this field These experiments supported by grants from NIMH occupied him for the next 10 years during his time at Brooklyn College Adelphi University and the research labs at Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia This last job was his second interdisciplinary experience working in close collaboration with Harold Persky who added measures of hormonal changes to the sensory deprivation experiments He collaborated with Persky in studies of hormonal changes during experimentally hypnotically induced emotions During his time at Einstein he established relationships with other principal investigators in the area of sensory deprivation and they collaborated on the book Sensory Deprivation 15 years of research edited by John Zubek 1969 His chapter on theoretical constructs contained the idea of using individual differences in optimal levels of stimulation and arousal as an explanation for some of the variations in response to sensory deprivation The first sensation seeking scale SSS had been developed in the early 1960 s based on these constructs At the time of his move to the University of Delaware in 1969 he turned his full attention to the SSS as the operational measure of the optimal level constructs This was the time of the drug and sexual revolutions on and off campuses and research relating experience in these areas to the basic trait paid off and is continuing to this day in many laboratories Two books have been written on this topic Sensation Seeking Beyond the Optimal Level of Arousal 1979 Behavioral Expressions and Biosocial Bases of Sensation Seeking 1994 Research on sensation seeking in America and countries around the world continues at an unabated level of journal articles several hundred appearing since the 1994 book on the subject Affect, Cognition and Stereotyping Diane M. Mackie, David L. Hamilton, 2014-06-28 This volume presents a collection of chapters exploring the interface of cognitive and affective processes in stereotyping Stereotypes and prejudice have long been topics of interest in social psychology but early literature and research in this area focused on affect alone while later studies focused primarily on cognitive factors associated with information processing strategies This volume integrates the roles of both affect and cognition with regard to the formation representation and modification of stereotypes and the implications of these processes for the escalation or amelioration of intergroup tensions Reviewed Development maintenance and change of stereotypes and prejudice Interaction of affective and cognitive processes as antecedents of stereotyping and prejudice Affect and cognitive consequences of group categorization perception and interaction The interaction of cognitive and affective processes in social perception Award Winning Chapter The Esses et al was the 1992 winner of the Otto Klineberg award given by the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues which cited the chapter as having offered a substantial advance in our understanding of basic psychological processes underlying racism stereotyping and prejudice
