suggest they could become major crops in the future a few are already widespread but their possibilities are not yet fully realized Most of the plants described in this book have the capacity to provide their own nitrogenous fertilizer through bacteria that live in nodules on their roots the bacteria chemically convert nitrogen gas from the air into soluble compounds that the plant can absorb and utilize As a result legumes generally require no additional nitrogenous fertilizer for average growth This is advantageous because commercial nitrogenous fertilizers are now extremely expensive for peasant farmers This report demonstrates how farmers in developing countries by using leguminous plants can grow useful crops while avoiding that expense However the plants to be discussed here should be seen as complements to not as substitutes for conventional tropical crops Progress in Upland Rice Research International Rice Research Institute,1986

to detone true botanical seed tubers roots or other plant parts Since root and tuber crops are almost exclusively multiplied by vegetative propagation this is the meaning of seed commonly used in this publication Without good seed the impact of other input on yield such as fertilizer and soil preparation will not be as economical IN addition good seed can be adapted to small as well as large farm and it is responsive even under less favorable climatic conditions

Transfer Isaac Arnon, 2012-12-06 Agricultural research was probably the first and is the most widespread form of organised research in the world and one in which both the most developed and underdeveloped countries are engaged Whilst most forms of research activity such as in the field of medicine have world wide application agricultural research by its very nature has to be regional practically no research finding can be adopted without studying the results of its application under the infinite number of ecological situations with which the farmers of the world are faced The improvement of agricultural production is the essential first step whereby developing countries can hope to raise their standard of living Research is therefore an activity in which no underdeveloped country can afford not to engage nor can countries in which agriculture has reached a high level of development and sophistication afford to neglect agricultural research It is not because of inertia or vested interests that highly industrialised countries maintain mostly at public expense a costly and complex infrastructure for agricultural research Even when problems of overproduction weigh heavily on the economy agricultural research is considered the essential key to further progress the objectives and goals are simply changed and adapted to the needs of the economy Technical Series Bulletin United States.
