Economic Instruments For Air Pollution Control:

Economic Instruments for Air Pollution Control Ger Klaassen, Finn R. Førsund, 2012-12-06 Economic theory and empirical models suggest that economic instruments should help us to meet environmental goals at lower cost Practical experience however shows that the cost savings of emission trading are smaller than expected and charges usually have had small incentive impacts This book gives the first comprehensive review of economic theory simulation models and practical experience with the use of economic instruments The book focuses on air pollution control Part I examines theoretical aspects and simulation modeling in a national context Part II surveys the practical experience in a variety of countries Part III explores international issues such as joint implementation Because of its unique blend of theoretical and empirical research the book will prove interesting for both economists and those interested in environmental policy Survey of Economic Instruments for Air Pollution Control, 1991

Economic Instruments for Air Pollution Control in Sweden Kerstin Lövgren, 1994

The role of economic instruments within the Mexico City air pollution control policy Andres Flores-Montalvo, 1998

Alternative Approaches to Pollution Control and Waste Management Janis D. Bernstein, World Bank, 1993

The Theory and Practice of Command and Control in Environmental Policy Peter Berck, 2018-01-12 This title was first published in 2003 Economists have had increasing success in arguing the merits of market based approaches to environmental problems By making polluting expensive market based approaches provide polluters with incentives to clean up rather than mandates to stop polluting These approaches include pollution taxes transferable emissions permits and subsidies for pollution abatement The purpose of this volume is to explore the situations where Command and Control CAC may not be all bad and in fact might even have some advantages over market based instruments MBI

Using Economic Instruments to Control Air Pollution from Stationary Sources, 1994

Environmental Economic Series Using Economic Instruments to Control Air Pollution from Stationary Sources Walter MOORE, NSW Environment Protection Authority, 1994

Economic Instruments of Pollution Control in an Imperfect World Tingsong Jiang, 2003 In this book Tingsong Jiang extensively discusses the wider issues of economic instruments of pollution control as well as paying specific attention to the control of carbon dioxide emissions in China The book begins with a general analysis of economic instruments of pollution control and is followed by the application of these in CO2 emission control The former presents the discussion of pollution control policies in general equilibrium settings focusing on the comparison of pollution taxes and tradable permits in certain kinds of circumstances with imperfections such as uncertainty and pre existing distortions An empirical evaluation of China s environmental policies is also included The latter brings the discussion into the area of global warming policies with the focus on the implications to China A dynamic general equilibrium model G Cubed T is developed to produce CO2 emissions projections from China the US and the rest of the world and to simulate various policy targets and instruments China may adopt to control its CO2 emissions With its systematic evaluation of China's environmental policy this thorough and rigorous assessment will be invaluable reading for academics in environmental economics and environmental management policy analysts in environmental protection and global warming fields policymakers and government officials around the world as well as China specialists

Van den Bergh, 2002-01-01 This major reference book comprises specially commissioned surveys in environmental and resource economics written by an international team of experts Authoritative yet accessible each entry provides a state of the art summary of key areas that will be invaluable to researchers practitioners and advanced students

Economic Instruments for Pollution Control and Natural Resources Management in OECD Countries, 1999 Environmental Policy Between Regulation and Market C. Jeanrenaud, 2013-03-07 Environmental policies have traditionally relied on direct controls and on government investment to protect natural resources Today the drawbacks and impediments to this approach are evident heavy burdens borne by companies and the community complex regulations a danger of legislative inflation difficulties in meeting the goals set to name a few In response the environmental authorities in many countries have begun to reassess the efficacy of their programs with the result that market incentives and voluntary agreements with companies or branches of industry have been added to the arsenal of traditional environmental protection measures There are great expectations for new economic instruments which offer the twofold advantage of giving companies more freedom in the choice of means and of increasing the chances for meeting goals in a more cost effective way The authors of this book analyse these instruments green taxes tradeable permits covenants joint implementation internationally tradeable quotas from the point of view of cost effectiveness their ability to achieve environmental goals and public and corporate acceptability They endeavour to determine on the basis of experience to date whether these instruments are living up to the hopes placed in them

Handbook of Environmental Economics Karl-Goran Maler, Jeffrey R. Vincent, 2003-05-20 The Handbook of Environmental Economics focuses on the economics of environmental externalities and environmental public goods Volume I examines environmental degradation and policy responses from a microeconomic institutional standpoint Its perspective is dynamic including a consideration of the dynamics of natural systems and global with attention paid to issues in both rich and poor nations In addition to chapters on well established topics such as the theory and practice of pollution regulation it includes chapters on new areas of environmental economics research related to common property management regimes population and poverty mechanism design political economy of regulation experimental evaluations of policy instruments and technological change
