services are delivered in the most equitable manner to structuring the health care delivery system to be most effective to waging campaigns against the leading causes of mortality and morbidity The government needs the best information available on existing conditions in order to devise strategies to successfully meet these challenges This technical paper summarizes the results of three research efforts concerning current health care issues in Uganda Its purpose is to summarize key actions and identify new challenges In Part I Equity of Access to Health Services in Uganda the Effects of Income Gender Proximity to Services and Quality of Care the author examines a number of factors that affect access to health services including quality of services and income Part II of this technical paper Decentralization of Health Services in Uganda Moving toward Improved Delivery of Services summarizes the key actions that have been undertaken during the decentralization of Uganda's health sector and identifies challenges that are emerging during this process Part III Malaria a Priority Health Problem summarizes the status of malaria control in Uganda and highlights some of the key issues that need to be addressed to further strengthen malaria control efforts This paper should prove useful to those working in Uganda and in other countries facing similar policy changes to anticipate the challenges as they seek to improve the quality of health and other public services

Economic Growth with Equity K. J. Langford, Christine L. Forster, Duncan M. Malcolm, 1999 Latin America and the Caribbean Region Viewpoints Many articles have been written about the causes of financial crises in emerging market Much less attention has been devoted to the effectiveness of alternative policy responses and the ensuing process of recovery of the real economy This paper analyzes the adjustment process in the aftermath of speculative attacks in six countries Argentina Brazil Mexico Indonesia Korea and Thailand As implied by the title the main question to be addressed is whether the tales of adjustment in these Latin American and Asian economies were similar This comparison is interesting for several reasons The six countries came under the aegis of adjustment programs supported by international financial institutions and the associated policy prescriptions have been at the center of attention Of the six cases one is an example of a successful defense of the currency while another exemplifies a temporarily successful defense followed by an incomplete adjustment program The others experienced dramatic currency devaluations This small sample of episodes of adjustment also offers variety in the magnitude of the ensuing economic decline While the Mexican and Argentine crises of 1995 and even the Brazilian adjustment after the October 1997 attack against its currency were certainly costly the Asian crises have been deeper and the recovery of the real economy has been slower The paper draws policy implications for reducing the costs of the macroeconomic adjustment after currency crises Also available English edition 1999 52 pages Stock no 14541 ISBN 0 8213 4541 9

Managing the Real and Fiscal Effects of Banking Crises Daniela Klingebiel, Luc Laeven, 2002 This volume provides two recent analyses of government responses to financial crises they have been developed in the light of the recent East Asian crisis but also draw on experiences from other regions Issues discussed relate to the tradeoffs involved in public policies for systemic financial and corporate sector restructuring and the use of cross country evidence to determine whether specific crisis containment and resolution policies effect the fiscal costs of resolving a crisis The book also presents information on 113 systemic banking crises that have occurred in 93 countries since the 1970s as well as 50 borderline or non systemic banking crises in 44 countries during the same period

Between Militarism and Technocratic Governance Anders Sjögren, 2013 State civil society relations in Africa have during recent decades been transformed in the context of economic liberalisation and state reform This study explores state civil society relations in contemporary Uganda from 1986 to the present in order to illustrate and explain the scope for and capacity of different social forces to create access to and democratise the state The study interrogates state civil society relations under the incumbent National Resistance Movement government as these are expressed through forms of interest representation and conflict regulation in different political arenas It analyses this problem through an empirical study of the health sector at both national and local levels Changes in the health regime the rules and practices that regulate health politics are analysed by a historical reconstruction of how different health regimes evolved from demands from social forces on the colonial and post colonial state in relation to broader patterns of political change The ruling political coalition from 1986 has promoted a model for capitalist development based on donor driven economic growth institutional reform and political monopoly what is referred to in the study as technocratic governance Throughout however the technocratic tendency has been shaped in relation to the political economy of militarism as a more openly repressive form of authoritarian rule The study argues that limits to democratisation of state society relations within the health sector and of Ugandan politics at large are best explained by relations of domination in society within the state and among external political forces The main conclusion is that democratisation of the state has been resisted by ruling groups and therefore restricted

Informed and Healthy Maria G. N. Musoke, 2016-06-15 Informed and Healthy Theoretical and Applied Perspectives on the Value of Information to Health Care focuses on two major issues the value attributed to information by users and its effect on health care and a new model of information behavior in which the value of information drives various information activities unlike many information models which tend to give prominence to information needs The inductive development of the model is explained with associated implications for theory and transferability or applicability elsewhere The book uses a case study of the health information system in Uganda and expands the analysis by comparing it to other systems utilized by different countries in diverse levels of development Topics such as access and use of information value attribution and effect on health outcomes and modelling information behavior and its implications on health informatics are discussed in detail This book is a valuable resource for health professionals planners and policy makers as well as researchers interested in health information systems and their applicability in different environments Provides a new model of information behaviour that emerges inductively from qualitative data Focuses on value of information rather than information needs Explains in detail the methodological approach used to value attribution Serves as a valuable resource for health professionals planners and policy makers as well as researchers interested in health information systems and their applicability in different environments      Environmental Health James A. Listorti, Fadi M. Doumani, 2001-01-01 Environmental health remains at the periphery of sustainable development because it is inadequately defined and institutionally fragmented This publication aims to provide ways of addressing this multisectoral problem It is in three parts The first looks at harmonising sectoral priorities and shows that environmental health can target at least as much disease as the health sector The second part provides environmental health assessment guidelines The third part looks at the results of a pilot project to put theory into practice in Ghana      Bibliographic Index ,1999
