Cotton, 1993-02-16 This volume examines the different ways in which businesses can improve performance by cultivating more employee involvement in their jobs and in the organization itself The first chapters review the history and empirical research in this area and make a case for greater employee participation in the workplace Subsequent chapters survey the varieties of employee participation quality of work life programmes quality circles gain sharing plans self directed work teams and employee ownership with special attention to implementation The final chapters summarize the success factors for better employee involvement systems

How Does Employee Involvement in Decision-Making Benefit Organisations? Agnès Parent-Thirion, Isabella Biletta, Stavroula Demetriades, Duncan Gallie, Ying Zhou, 2020 How do organisations get the best out their employees Research on human resource management has found that a key practice is employee involvement enabling employees to make decisions on their own work and to contribute to organisational decision making A high degree of employee involvement creates work environments that are highly motivational and that emphasise skill development And this is the type of work environment that organisations need to meet the demands for innovation and adaptability to technological change in a knowledge driven economy This policy brief examines the empirical evidence that workplaces where employee involvement is high are more successful in developing the capacity for high performance in workers than workplaces with lower levels of involvement It examines the influence of work organisation on two factors contributing to performance work engagement and skill development

Managing Employee Involvement and Participation Jeff Hyman, Bob Mason, 1995-10-20 As issues of employee involvement and participation once more evoke considerable controversy this textbook provides an accessible overview of the main strands perspectives and debates in current thinking and practice It adopts a comparative international approach addressing developments in the United Kingdom and mainland Europe the United States and elsewhere The authors identify two main strands of evolution one driven by managerial interests in enhancing and controlling employee commitment and performance the other deriving from employees attempts to influence high level organizational decision making In particular they examine and analyze the background of key concepts issues and philosophies underpinning

Different Strategies for Employee Involvement Mohamed Radwan, 2018-05-15 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2017 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade A University of Northampton language English abstract Employee involvement is one of the most important aspects which affect the work performance and prove worker effectiveness The main idea behind employees involvement is to transfer the knowledge from the top management level down to the employees who deal with the customers and daily operation because they are the best people who can give accurate feedback about the decision taken and its reflection to the organization and customers Human resource practices play a vital role in the employee involvement process as because of their strategic view they can align the employee interest with the firm interest to produce an employee who has the capability and the willingness of improving the organization. The firm can get great benefit from involving and empowering employees by allowing them to discover and utilize their knowledge in the organization. It is not only about sharing information and about thinking how to improve work processes and performance but the successful implementation of the employees involvement may include the decision making involvement and took some responsibilities with some freedom of innovation. This paper will discuss the employees involvement strategies like motivation teamwork involvement and work performance and will discuss its opportunities and challenges while implementing it with different cultures. Kusluvan, 2003 The tourism industry of which the hospitality industry is the core element is one of the largest and the fastest growing industries world wide. According to World Tourism Organisation forecasts the industry will continue to grow and employ more people in the twenty first century. In parallel with the growth of the tourism and hospitality industry world wide consumer expectations and demands for quality are rising while consumer tastes are varying on the one hand and competition among the firms both nationally and internationally is intensifying on the other. In this business environment of heightened consumer expectations distinct market segments that demand unique products and services and stiff competition tourism and hospitality organisations are looking for ways to excel in service quality customer satisfaction competition and performance. This book takes the view that employees are one of the most if not the most important resources or assets for tourism and hospitality organisations in their endeavour to provide excellent service meet and exceed consumer expectations achieve competitive advantage and exceptional organisational performance. The purpose of this book is to emphasise the critical role of employees for tourism and hospitality organisations and to examine the ways and means of managing their attitudes and behaviours for the mutual benefit of both parties tourism and hospitality organisations and their employees.

Management Fads and Buzzwords David Collins, 2000 This text argues that the fads and buzzwords of management deflect critical inquiry and limit useful action because they present a ready made view of the world which rejects the benefits of theoretical analysis and reflection. The book attempts to unpack the guru industry and the fads and buzzwords of management to provide a critical practical analysis designed to allow readers to locate to understand and to critique management fashion. Personnel Practice Malcolm Martin, Tricia Jackson, 2002 This is the leading textbook for students taking the CIPD Certificate in Personnel Practice and has been fully revised and rewritten to take account of the new academic standards that will be taught from September 2002.
