Excerpt from From Grieg to Brahms Studies of Some Modern Composers and Their Art: Music may be hard to understand but musicians are men so remarked a friend of mine when I was first planning these essays. The sentence sums up very happily a truth I have constantly had in mind in writing them. As all music, no matter what its complexity on the technical side, is in essence an expression of personal feeling and as the qualities of a man's personality show themselves not only in his works but in his acts, his words, his face, his handwriting, and carriage, even it has seemed natural and fruitful in these studies to seek acquaintance with the musicians through acquaintance with the men.
