Youth Justice Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Justice Committee, 2013-03-14 Public authorities have a duty to ensure looked after children are not at greater risk of being drawn into the criminal justice system than other children The relevant authorities must continue to support looked after children and care leavers when they are in and when they leave custody The substantial decrease since 2006 07 in the number of young people entering the criminal justice system for the first time is welcomed but looked after children have not benefited from this shift to the same extent as other children The Youth Justice Board has done excellent work to halve the youth custodial population over the past decade but continues to spend 246 million a year detaining a small fraction of young offenders Recommendations include a statutory threshold to enshrine in legislation the principle that only the most serious and prolific young offenders should be placed in custody devolving the custody budget to enable local authorities to invest in effective alternatives to custody and more action to reduce the number of young people who breach the terms of their community sentences and the number of young black men in custody The aim of improving the basic literacy of offenders as outlined in the Transforming Youth Custody consultation paper is endorsed but is it most useful to focus resources on the secure estate given that the average length of stay is currently 79 days The greater focus should be on improving transition between custody and the community and on improving provision in the community and incentivising schools and colleges to take back difficult students
