Marks, 2013-10-23 Are socioeconomic inequalities in education declining Is socioeconomic background becoming less important for people's occupational class or status How important is cognitive ability for education and later occupational outcomes How do countries differ in the importance of socioeconomic background for education and work Gary N Marks argues that in western industrialized countries pervasive views that socioeconomic background or class background has strong and unchanging relationships with education and later socioeconomic outcomes resistant to policy and social change are unfounded Marks provides a large amount of evidence from many countries showing that the influence of socioeconomic background for education is moderate and most often declining and socioeconomic background has only very weak impacts on adults occupation and earnings after taking into account education and cognitive ability Furthermore Marks shows that cognitive ability is a more powerful influence than socioeconomic background for educational outcomes and that in addition to its indirect effects through education has a direct effect on occupation and earnings Its effects cannot be dismissed as simply another aspect of socioeconomic background nor do the usual criticisms of cognitive ability apply The declining effects for socioeconomic background and the importance of cognitive ability support several of the contentions of modernization theory The book contributes to a variety of debates within sociology quantitative and qualitative approaches explanatory and non explanatory theory the relationship between theory and empirical research the role of political ideology in research sociology as a social science and sociology s contribution to knowledge about contemporary societies It will appeal to professionals in the fields of education and sociology as well as postgraduate students and academics involved in the debate the clients served not by the type of legal service rendered In fact the distinction between corporate and individual clients divides the bar into two remarkably separate hemispheres Using data from extensive personal interviews with nearly 800 Chicago lawyers the authors show that lawyers who serve one type of client seldom serve the other Furthermore lawyers political ethno religious and social ties are very likely to correspond to those of their client types Greater deference is consistently shown to corporate lawyers who seem to acquire power by association with their powerful clients Heinz and Laumann also discover that these two hemispheres of the legal profession are not effectively integrated by intraprofessional organizations such as the bar courts or law schools The fact that the bar is structured primarily along extraprofessional lines raises intriguing questions about the law and the nature of professionalism questions addressed in a provocative and far ranging final chapter This volume published jointly with the American Bar Foundation offers a uniquely sophisticated and comprehensive analysis of lawyers professional lives It will be of exceptional importance to sociologists and others interested in the legal profession in the general study of professions and in social stratification and the distribution of power
