Woodworking has been one of the most important technologies from the earliest times Carpentry was important for buildings and bridges and as an integral part of most construction processes The history of this subject has been explored by a variety of scholars from archaeologists who have studied medieval timber techniques to engineers who have been interested in the development of bridges The different studies have explored the methods of carpentry the behaviour of the structures that were built and even the economic and social histories behind the development of carpentry techniques This book collects together a number of papers representing this full range of scholarship as well as providing a general review of work in the field Down and Out in Eighteenth-Century London Tim Hitchcock, 2004-01-01 London in the eighteenth century was the greatest city in the world It was a magnet that drew men and women from the rest of England in huge numbers For a few the streets were paved with gold but for the majority it was a harsh world with little guarantee of money or food For the poor and destitute London s streets offered little more than the barest living Yet men women and children found a great variety of ways to eke out their existence sweeping roads selling matches singing ballads and performing all sorts of menial labor Many of these activities apart from the direct begging of the disabled depended on an appeal to charity but one often mixed with threats and promises Down and Out in Eighteenth Century London provides a remarkable insight into the lives of Londoners for all of whom the demands of charity and begging were part of their everyday world The birth of modern London

, 2021-02-23 The period 1660 1720 saw the foundation of modern London The city was transformed post Fire from a tight warren of medieval timber framed buildings into a vastly expanded regularised landscape of brick houses laid out in squares and spacious streets This work for the first time examines in detail the building boom and the speculative developers who created that landscape It offers a wealth of new information on their working practices the role of craftsmen and the design thinking which led to the creation of a new prototype for English housing The book concentrates on the mass produced houses of the middling sort which saw the adoption of classicism on a large scale in this country for the first time McKellar

Yeomans,2003 England has a surprising number of timber framed buildings many dating back to pre 1700 which are listed buildings There is now an increasing demand for these buildings to be adapted to suit modern day requirements This book takes a practical approach and discusses materials and carpentry techniques used in the repair of these buildings along with a qualitative account of the structural behaviour of the timber elements St Paul's Cathedral John Schofield,2016-09-30 This is the first volume concerned solely with the archaeology of a major late 17th century building in London and the major changes it has undergone St Paul s Cathedral in the City of London was built in 1675 1711 to the designs of Sir Christopher Wren and has been described as an iconic building many times In this major new account John Schofield examines the cathedral from an archaeological perspective reviewing its history from the early 18th to the early 21st century as illustrated by recent archaeological recording documentary research and engineering assessment A detailed account of the construction of the cathedral is provided based on a comparison of the fabric with voluminous building accounts which have survived and evidence from recent archaeological investigation The construction of the Wren building and its embellishments are followed by the main works of later surveyors such as Robert Mylne and Francis Penrose The 20th century brought further changes and conservation projects including restoration after the building was hit by two bombs in World War II and all its windows blown out The 1990s and first years of the present century have witnessed considerable refurbishment and cleaning involving archaeological and engineering works Archaeological specialist reports and an engineering review of the stability and character of the building are provided
