Evidence-Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing Students Patricia Elizabeth Spencer, Marc Marschark, 2010-07-21 Debates about methods of supporting language development and academic skills of deaf or hard of hearing children have waxed and waned for more than 100 years Will using sign language interfere with learning to use spoken language or does it offer optimal access to communication for deaf children Does placement in classrooms with mostly hearing children enhance or impede academic and social emotional development Will cochlear implants or other assistive listening devices provide deaf children with sufficient input for age appropriate reading abilities Are traditional methods of classroom teaching effective for deaf and hard of hearing students Although there is a wealth of evidence with regard to each of these issues too often decisions on how to best support deaf and hard of hearing children in developing language and academic skills are made based on incorrect or incomplete information No matter how well intentioned decisions grounded in opinions beliefs or value judgments are insufficient to guide practice Instead we need to take advantage of relevant emerging research concerning best practices and outcomes in educating deaf and hard of hearing learners In this critical evaluation of what we know and what we do not know about educating deaf and hard of hearing students the authors examine a wide range of educational settings and research methods that have guided deaf education in recent years or should The book provides a focus for future educational and research efforts and aims to promote optimal support for deaf and hard of hearing learners of all ages Co authored by two of the most respected leaders in the field this book summarizes and evaluates research findings across multiple disciplines pertaining to the raising and educating of deaf children providing a comprehensive but concise record of the successes failures and unanswered questions in deaf education A readily accessible and invaluable source for teachers university students and other professionals Evidence Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard of Hearing Students encourages readers to reconsider assumptions and delve more deeply into what we really know about deaf and hard of hearing children their patterns of development and their lifelong learning

Ramsey,1997 In this pioneering book Ramsey assesses the progress of three second grade deaf students by first pointing out that they were placed in two different environments with the general population of hearing students and separately with other deaf and hard of hearing children Her study reveals that although both settings were ostensibly educational inclusion in the general population was done to comply with the law not to establish specific goals for the deaf children In contrast self contained classes for deaf and hard of hearing children were designed especially to concentrate upon their particular learning needs This cohesive book offers educators scholars and parents a remarkable stage for assessing and enhancing the educational context for the deaf children within their purview     Educating Deaf Learners Harry Knoors,Marc Marschark,2015 Education for deaf learners has gone through significant changes over the past three decades The needs of many have changed considerably But deaf learners are not hearing learners who cannot hear This volume adopts a broad international perspective capturing the complexities and commonalities in the developmental mosaic of deaf learners     Diversity in Deaf Education Marc Marschark,Venetta Lampropoulou,Emmanouil K. Hauser, 2011-12-01 How can parents and teachers most effectively support the language development and academic success of deaf and hard of hearing children Will using sign language interfere with learning spoken language Should deaf children be placed in classrooms with hearing children Are traditional methods of teaching subjects such as reading and math to hearing children appropriate for deaf learners As many parents and teachers will attest questions like these have no easy answers and it can be difficult for caring adults to separate science from politics and fact from opinion in order to make informed decisions about how to help deaf children learn In this invaluable guide renowned authorities Marc Marschark and Peter Hauser highlight important new advances in scientific and educational research that can help parents and teachers of students with significant hearing loss The authors stress that deaf children have strengths and needs that are sometimes very different from those who can hear Consequently if deaf students are to have full academic access and optimal educational outcomes it is essential that parents and teachers learn to recognize these differences and adjust their teaching methods to them Marschark and Hauser explain how the fruits of research conducted over the last several years can markedly improve educational practices at home and in the classroom and they offer innovative strategies that parents and teachers can use to promote learning in their children The result is a lively accessible volume that sheds light on what it means to be a deaf learner and that provides a wealth of advice on how we can best support their language development social skills and academic success      Words Made Flesh R. A. R. Edwards, 2012-03-26

During the early nineteenth century schools for the deaf appeared in the United States for the first time These schools were committed to the use of the sign language to educate deaf students Manual education made the growth of the deaf community possible for it gathered deaf people together in sizable numbers for the first time in American history It also fueled the emergence of Deaf culture as the schools became agents of cultural transformations Just as the Deaf community began to be recognized as a minority culture in the 1850s a powerful movement arose to undo it namely oral education Advocates of oral education deeply influenced by the writings of public school pioneer Horace Mann argued that deaf students should stop signing and should start speaking in the hope that the Deaf community would be abandoned and its language and culture would vanish In this revisionist history Words Made Flesh explores the educational battles of the nineteenth century from both hearing and deaf points of view It places the growth of the Deaf community at the heart of the story of deaf education and explains how the unexpected emergence of

Deafness provoked the pedagogical battles that dominated the field of deaf education in the nineteenth century and still reverberate today

Teaching Deaf Learners Harry Knoors, PhD, Marc Marschark, 2014-05 Teaching Deaf Learners asserts that the education of deaf learners profits from an ecological approach to learning and teaching

Educating Deaf Students Marc Marschark, Harry G. Lang, John A. Albertini, 2002 Over the past decade there has been a significant increase in interest from educators and the general public about deafness special education and the development of children with special needs The education of deaf children in the United States has been seen as a remarkable success story around the world even while it continues to engender domestic debate In Educating Deaf Students From Research to Practice Marc Marschark Harry G Lang and John A Albertini set aside the politics rhetoric and confusion that often accompany discussions of deaf education Instead they offer an accessible evaluation of the research literature on the needs and strengths of deaf children and on the methods that have been used successfully and unsuccessfully to teach both deaf and hearing children The authors lay out the common assumptions that have driven deaf education for many years revealing some of them to be based on questionable methods conclusions or interpretations while others have been lost in the cacophony of alternative educational philosophies They accompany their historical consideration of how this came to pass with an evaluation of the legal and social conditions surrounding deaf education today By evaluating what we know what we do not know and what we thought we knew about learning among deaf children the authors provide parents teachers and administrators valuable new insights into educating deaf students and others with special needs

Easterbrooks PhD, Jennifer Beal-Alvarez MA, 2013-02-14 Most students who are deaf or hard of hearing DHH struggle with acquiring literacy skills some as a direct result of their hearing loss some because they are receiving insufficient modifications to access the general education curriculum and some because they have additional learning challenges necessitating significant program modifications Additionally instructional practices for DHH students tend to be directed toward two sub populations of DHH students those with useable access to sound and those without Literacy Instruction for Students who are Deaf and Hard of Hearing describes current evidence based practices in teaching literacy for DHH students and provides practitioners and parents with a process for determining whether a practice is or is not evidence based Easterbrooks and Beals Alvarez describe the importance of the assessment process in providing on going progress monitoring to document students literacy growth as a primary means to direct the course of instruction They address the five key areas of instruction identified by the National Reading Panel phonemic awareness phonics fluency vocabulary and comprehension In this concise guidebook the authors present the role of assessment in the literacy process an overview of evidence based practices and in the absence of such information those practices supported by causal factors across the National Reading Panel s five areas of literacy They also review the evidence base related to writing instruction present case studies that reflect the diversity within the DHH population and review the challenges yet to be addressed in
