Embodied Inequalities in Disability and Development Hisayo Katsui, Virpi Mesiäislehto, 2022-04-08 This book highlights the embodied knowledge of persons with disabilities as a vital resource for understanding equality without taking disability and development for granted The perspective of embodied inequality offers alternative ways to comprehend our normality as until now the notion of normality has too frequently excluded persons with disabilities and their perspectives Disability inclusion has never been as important as it is today in the development discourse yet systematic discrimination against people due to their disabilities persists To address this the link between theories and practices is strengthened in this book Through using different contexts in the different book chapters the readers are informed of how profoundly inequalities are embedded in our society and pronounced as embodied experiences of persons with disabilities The chapters are written not only by academics but also by disability activists and NGO representatives The chapters focus on disabilities and development as embodied inequalities manifested at different levels including theory law and policy and practice In conclusion the book presents 6 As as lessons learned from decolonial understanding and conceptions of embodied inequalities in different contexts of disability and development Availability Affordability Accessibility Accountability Assistance and Affection

Geographies of Race and Food Rachel Slocum, Arun Saldanha, 2016-04-15 While interest in the relations of power and identity in food explodes a hesitancy remains about calling these racial What difference does race make in the fields where food is grown the places it is sold and the manner in which it is eaten How do we understand farming and provisioning tasting and picking eating and being eaten hunger and gardening better by paying attention to race This collection argues there is an unacknowledged racial dimension to the production and consumption of food under globalization Building on case studies from across the world it advances the conceptualization of race by emphasizing embodiment circulation and materiality while adding to food advocacy an antiracist perspective it often lacks Within the three socio physical spatialities of food fields bodies and markets the collection reveals how race and food are intricately linked An international and multidisciplinary team of scholars complements each other to shed light on how human groups become entrenched in myriad hierarchies through food at scales from the dining room and market stall to the slave trade and empire Following foodways as they constitute racial formations in often surprising ways the chapters achieve a novel approach to the process of race as one that cannot be reduced to biology culture or capitalism

Bioethics Reenvisioned Nancy M. P. King, Gail E. Henderson, Larry R. Churchill, 2022-11-29 Bioethics needs an expanded moral vision Born in the ferment of the 1970s the field responded to rapid developments in biomedical technology and injustices in clinical care and research Since then bioethics has predominantly focused on respect for autonomy beneficence and nonmaleficence and the zero sum lifeboat ethics of distributive justice applying these principles almost exclusively within the walls of medical institutions It is now time for bioethics to take full account of the problems of health disparities and structural injustice that are made newly urgent by the COVID 19 pandemic and the effects of climate change This book shows why and how the field must embrace a broader and more meaningful view of justice principally by incorporating the tools and insights of the social sciences epidemiology and public health Nancy M P King Gail E Henderson and Larry R Churchill make the case for a more social understanding and application of justice a deeper humility in assessing expertise in bioethics consulting a broader and more relevant research agenda and greater appreciation of the profound health implications of global warming

Counting Matters Christina Gabriel, L. Pauline Rankin, 2024-04-15 Counting Matters examines the ways in which the rise of gender equality measurement contributes to but falls short of effective gender equality policy implementation As technocrats adopt often contextless indices questions of the theoretical and practical limitations of measurement arise especially as they pertain to social and cultural relations The indicators being produced influence the allocation of resources as political decisions but are themselves part of a power regime based on the collection and analysis of data a regime that obfuscates biases and the agendas behind the statistics The book's contributors pose critical questions of the ways in which measurement culture manifests within the field of gender equality asking how it is measured in different policy areas how we might improve existing practices and what is revealed through the examination and critique of the technical turn in policies that purport to promote gender equality
