Beating Time & Measuring Music in the Early Modern Era Roger Mathew Grant, 2014 Beating Time Measuring Music in the Early Modern Era chronicles the shifting relationships between ideas about time in music and science from the sixteenth through the early nineteenth centuries Centered on theories of musical meter the book investigates the interdependence between theories of meter and conceptualizations of time from the age of Zarlino to the invention of the metronome These formulations have evolved throughout the history of Western music reflecting fundamental reevaluations not only of music but also of time itself Drawing on paradigms from the history of science and technology and the history of philosophy author Roger Mathew Grant illustrates ways in which theories of meter and time informed by one another have manifested themselves in the field of music During the long eighteenth century treatises on subjects such as aesthetics music theory mathematics and natural philosophy began to reflect an understanding of time as an absolute quantity independent of events This gradual but conclusive change had a profound impact on the network of ideas connecting time meter character and tempo Investigating the impacts of this change Grant explores the timekeeping techniques musical and otherwise that implemented this conceptual shift both technologically and materially Bringing together diverse strands of thought in a broader intellectual history of temporality Grant's study fills an unexpected yet conspicuous gap in the history of music theory and is essential reading for music theorists and composers as well as historical musicologists and practitioners of historically informed performance history's greatest scientific adventures Yet behind the public triumph of the metric system lies a secret error one that is perpetuated in every subsequent definition of the meter As acclaimed historian and novelist Ken Alder discovered through his research there were only two people on the planet who knew the full extent of this error Delambre and Mechain themselves By turns a science history detective tale and human drama The Measure of All Things describes a quest that succeeded as it failed and continues to enlighten and inspire to this day Forests in Revolutionary France Kieko Matteson, 2015-04-16 This book investigates the bitterly contested development of environmental conservation in France from the seventeenth to the nineteenth century suggesting that conflicts over forests between the state landowning elites and the peasantry not only reflected escalating demand for this most vital of natural resources but also shaped the country's revolutionary struggles Canadian History: Beginnings to Confederation Martin Brook Taylor, Doug Owram, 1994-01-01 In these two volumes which replace the Reader's Guide to Canadian History experts provide a select and critical guide to historical writing about pre and post Confederation Canada with an emphasis on the most recent scholarship Cover French Gothic Ivories Sarah M.
