Understanding Economic Behaviour Klaus Günter Grunert, Folke Ölander, 2012-12-06 may be related to another basic assumption in economic psychology that the human capacity to process information from the environment is limited and that the kind of optimal use of that information postulated in many economic theories is therefore not possible The research methods used are mainly geared towards empirical research and there mostly towards survey research and experimentation Experimentation involves most often simulated behaviour in a laboratory which allows the experimental manipulation of possible causes of behaviour which would not be possible in real life Survey research is the most widely used instrument for investigating real world behaviour with all its caveats about establishing causal explanations Several introductory books e g Fumham Lea Tarpy van Raaij van Veldhoven Wiswede 1988 have appeared recently which try to give an overview of the field of economic psychology and which in varying degrees demonstrate the three foundations of economic psychology just mentioned Others have concentrated on certain subtopics such as the psychology of the labour market e g Baxter 1988 Pelzmann 1986
