'Benefits Bestowed'? J. A. Mangan, 1988 The study of the European Union has historically been a theoretical battleground Since the 1990s new theoretical directions such as neo institutionalism multi level governance and constructivism have provided a new impetus However despite these new inroads empirical work has often remained sociologically and empirically underspecified This volume seeks to bridge the gap between theory and fieldwork by developing an actor centred political sociology In doing so the volume engages in a critical dialogue with the constructivist framework and proposes to build on its insights through a sociological hardening centred on European actors The renewal of European studies through political sociology is only useful if it generates new understandings through empirical observation This volume seeks to take a new tack on constructivism by asking what it is that Europe constructs by looking at three areas social spaces and professions policy problems and policies and policy instruments such as the Eurobarometer

Children, Education and Empire in Early Sierra Leone Katrina Keefer, 2018-06-27 Nineteenth century Sierra Leone presented a unique situation historically as the focal point of early abolitionist efforts settlement within West Africa by westernized Africans and a rapid demographic increase through the judicial emancipation of Liberated Africans Within this complex and often volatile environment the voices and experiences of children have been difficult to trace and to follow Enslaved children historically are a challenging narrative to highlight due to their comparative vulnerability This book offers newly transcribed data and fills in a lacuna in the scholarship of early Sierra Leone and the Atlantic world It presents a narrative of children as they experienced a set of circumstances which were unique and important to abolitionist historiography and demonstrates how each element of that situation arose by analyzing the rich documentary evidence By presenting the data as well as the individuals whose lives were affected by the mission schools both as teacher or pupil this study has sought to be as complete as possible Underlying the more academic tone is a recognition of the individual humanity of both teachers and students whose lives together shaped this early phase in the history of Sierra Leone The missionaries who created the documents from which this study arises all died in Sierra Leone after having profound impacts on the lives of many hundreds of pupils Their students went on to become important historical figures both locally and throughout West Africa Not all rose to prominence and the book reconstructs the lives of pupils who became local tradespeople in addition to those who had a greater social stature This book attempts to offer analysis without forgetting the fundamental human trajectories which this material encompasses

Missionaries and modernity Felicity Jensz, 2022-02-22 Many missionary societies established mission schools in the nineteenth century in the British Empire as a means to convert non Europeans to Christianity Although the details differed in various colonial contexts the driving ideology behind mission schools was that Christian morality was highest form of civilisation needed for non Europeans to be useful members of colonies under British rule This comprehensive survey of multi colonial sites over the long time span clearly describes the missionary paradox that to draw in pupils they needed to provide secular education but that secular education was seen to lead both to a moral crisis and to anti British sentiments

Education and Empire David Alexander McLean, 1998 The social problems accompanying industrialization and rapid urban growth provoked a widespread debate which forced education onto the political agenda and the new ideas about teaching methods curricula and the physical and moral care of children developed rapidly This study based on records of the Admiralty Schools at Greenwich provides an insight into the problems and the achievements of mid 19th century schools catering for a range of pupils Bloomsbury Publishing

Empire, Education, and Indigenous Childhoods Helen May Baljit Kaur, 2016-05-06 Taking up a little known story of education schooling and missionary endeavor Helen May Baljit Kaur and Larry Prochner focus on the experiences of very young native children in three British colonies In missionary settlements across the northern part of the North Island of New Zealand Upper Canada and British controlled India experimental British ventures for placing young children of the poor in infant schools were simultaneously transported to and adopted for all three colonies From the 1820s to the 1850s this transplantation of Britain s infant schools to its distant colonies was deemed a radical and enlightened tool that was meant to hasten the conversion of heathen peoples by missionaries to Christianity and to European modes of civilization The intertwined legacies of European exploration enlightenment ideals education and empire building the authors argue provided a springboard for British colonial and missionary activity across the globe during the nineteenth century Informed by archival research and focused on the shared as well as unique aspects of the infant schools colonial experience Empire Education and Indigenous Childhoods illuminates both the pervasiveness of missionary education and the diverse contexts in which its attendant ideals were applied Educational Policy and the Mission Schools Brian Holmes, 2013-10-28 Originally published 1967 this title reveals how the missionaries so often misguided and short sighted were in fact pioneers of modernization science and freedom The structure of the book allows for comparative analysis and the volume illustrates how some of the social consequences of action through the schools could be foreseen In addition light is thrown on the results of Imperial rule during the nineteenth century and on the nature of the impact of Western education in Asia and Africa

Teaching the Empire Scott O. Moore, 2020-05-15 Teaching the Empire explores how Habsburg Austria utilized education to cultivate the patriotism of its people Public schools have been a tool for patriotic development in Europe and the United States since their creation in the nineteenth century On a basic level this civic education taught children about their state while also articulating the common myths heroes and ideas that could bind society together For the most part historians have focused on the development of civic education in nation states like Germany France and the United Kingdom There has been an assumption that the multinational Habsburg Monarchy did not or could not use their public schools for this purpose Teaching the Empire proves this was not the case Through a robust examination of the civic education curriculum used in the schools of Habsburg from 1867 1914 Moore demonstrates that Austrian authorities attempted to forge a layered identity rooted in loyalties to an individual's home province, national group and the empire itself. Far from seeing nationalism as a zero-sum game where increased nationalism decreased loyalty to the state, officials felt that patriotism could only be strong if regional and national identities were equally strong. The hope was that this layered identity would create a shared sense of belonging among populations that may not share the same cultural or linguistic background. Austrian civic education was part of every aspect of school life from classroom lessons to school events. This research revises long-standing historical notions regarding civic education within Habsburg and exposes the complexity of Austrian identity and civil society deservedly integrating the Habsburg Monarchy into the broader discussion of the role of education in modern society. Educational Systems of the

Principles, Practices, and Creative Tensions in Progressive Higher Education Katherine

Jelly, Alan Mandell, 2017-03-23 In this multi-faceted case study of one progressive institution of adult higher education the editors and contributors to the volume lay out significant challenges confronting not just non-traditional post-secondary colleges and universities but all institutions of higher education in today's rapidly changing context. Contending that non-traditional institutions are especially challenged in these turbulent times they argue that these organizations' distinctive academic programs are among the most threatened in the landscape of higher education today. The 19 essays that make up this volume highlight and examine key creative tensions, rich interplays of emphases and values in higher education in order to illuminate and address more intentionally the questions that we must address. Can we make constructive use of these tensions? Can we recognize what is at stake? And can we chart a course that will both respond innovatively to rapid change and sustain a vision and the purposes and principles on which that vision rests? Taken as a whole, this volume sheds light on the questions and creative tensions that can, with thoughtful attention, help to keep an alternative progressive vision of adult higher education alive.
