on domestic labour markets is a key issue for policy makers in both developed and less developed countries This book considers the most important current issues in this area in the context of models which examine the relationship between trade and employment It is divided into three parts The first deals with unemployment decay and the Dutch Disease the second with structural adjustment urban unemployment and protectionism the last offers some variations on models of unemployment In parts one and two the important insights are that minimum wages may cause decay rather than growth and that disaggregation of non traded goods between urban and rural regions is of critical importance in structural adjustment protectionism and the real exchange rate In part three segmented labour market theory is used to explain urban and disguised unemployment and the importance of proper agricultural policies for rural development is emphasised Finally the impact of technology transfers on employment in both donor and recipient countries is explored Economic Development and Multilateral Trade Cooperation

Michael Hudson, 2009-09-23 In this survey of international economic thought Michael Hudson rewrites the history of trade development and debt theorizing He shows that mainstream free trade surveys are censorial in excluding the protectionist logic that has guided the trade policy of Europe and the United States especially by leaving out discussion of the transfer problem and payment of international debts He points out that most economists throughout history have focused as much on war financing as on trade and development Free trade ideology and IMF style financial austerity under today's rules rather than benefiting all parties and maximizing welfare leave client nations severely indebted By excluding dynamics that used to be central to trade theory such as emigration and technology transfer today's global production and financial policies tend to concentrate economic and political power in the hands of dominant nations Prof Michael Hudson Economics Department University of Missouri Kansas City is a frequent contributor to The Financial Times Counterpunch and Global Research

Trade and Development J. F. J. Toye, 2003-01-01 This book questions what enduring lessons have been learnt about the interdependence of international trade and economic development during the last 50 years Since the end of the Cold War and the advent of the WTO developing countries have been forced to face the choice of whether and to what extent to integrate economically with the rest of the world The key issue of international political economy is emphasized The authors argue that while integration through trade has become increasingly necessary for successful development it rapidly encounters a series of problems that remain to be resolved These range from increasing inequality and instability the vagaries of WTO rules persistent agricultural protection in developed countries through to inadequate finance and new waves of technological innovation Underlying all these concerns however is the deeper question of how much the developing countries can influence the setting of the rules of the international system Trade and Development examines all the major topics in the area of trade and development along with proposals for new directions for UNCTAD The book will be of great interest to academics researchers NGOs and policymakers involved in international and development economics
