Eyes of Forgotten Innocence R. G. Nestle, 2004-07 This book was written when I was living in the middle of an emotional crisis I started to write parts of some of the poems when I took a Spanish literature and a Latin America poetry class at Southwest Texas State University in 1986 The poets we studied were very hermetic and I wanted to write poems that people could read understand and think about Voces de mi locura poemas y canciones Voices From My Madness Poems and Songs is a collection of poems that deal with my search to find God and overcome my supposed mental illness The poems talk about my life hope dreams and fears love and nature Some poems are dialogues and anti poems in prose that show the loss of my identity in the world family problems and pessimism Some of the Spanish poems have music and internal rhymes In other poems I play with words Most poems have uneven metrics and are free verse poems The poems in English are a translation from the Spanish ones and some acquired a different structure but still have music This collection participated in the Literary contest Letras de Oro Letters of Gold organized by the University of Miami under a Spanish version titled Voces de mi conciencia Voices From My Conscience in 1996 but did not win a prize The manuscript was later revised and translated into English and re titled as it is known today I wrote and translated this bilingual book with all my love care and respect for you my readers Thank you for buying my book and I hope to touch you in a positive way

Babich,2013-06-29 perceptual essences that can be rendered directly manifest in perception with the help of theoretically structured instruments serving as readable technologies Scientific knowledge should thus be understood as an extension of unassisted perception A perceptual fact has an outer horizon which separates it from the ground on which it appears and an inner horizon composed of a multiplicity of possible perceptual profiles organized by an invariant essence. The perceiving subject can bring forth a representative sample of the profiles in question occasionally by making use of certain technological processes which are themselves subject to interpretation in terms of theoretical representations. The theoretical entities described in these representations are not simply detected thanks to an inferential operation but rather they are directly perceived. It follows from this that the correspondence between the manifest image and the scientific image is not done one to one but by a many to one or one to many application between contextually defined perceptual objects within contexts that are mutually incompatible but complementary. This should not however be understood as a form of conventionalism nor as a form of cultural relativism. Pre-comprehension which guides interpretation imposes strict limits to the descriptive categories which can be used and to the manner in which they can be linked to appropriate empirical objects. The author applies his hermeneutic principles to the study of visual perception. In fact this question is treated in the first part of the book.
