This textbook aims to give an introduction to the use of documentary sources in social research. It is designed to be a companion to courses in research methods in the social sciences and history and a reference text for those beginning research on documentary sources. The book begins with an overview of the nature of social research and the variety of methods which can be used. Scott identifies three types of evidence useful in such research: physical evidence, personal evidence, and documentary evidence. He argues that the logic of research is common to each type of evidence but that each involves specific methodological issues. An appraisal grid for the analysis of documents is presented showing the criteria which must be used in evaluating documentary sources. In the following chapters, these criteria are applied to the variety of documentary sources available to the social researcher: census data and official statistics, government publications, directories and yearbooks, personal diaries and letters.

An International Study of Film Museums Rinella Cere, 2020-12-29 An International Study of Film Museums examines how cinema has been transformed and strengthened through museological and archival activities since its origins and asks what paradoxes may be involved if any in putting cinema into a museum. Cere explores the ideas that were first proposed during the first half of the twentieth century around the need to establish national museums of cinema and how these have been adapted in the subsequent development of the five case studies presented here: four in Europe and one in the USA. The book traces the history of the five museums, their foundation, exhibitions, collections, and festivals organised under their aegis, and it asks how they resolve the tensions between cinema as an aesthetic artefact, now officially recognised as part of humanity's cultural heritage, and cinema as an entertainment and leisure activity. It also gives an account of recent developments around unifying collections, exhibition activities, and archives in one national film centre that offers the general public a space totally devoted to film and cinematographic culture. An International Study of Film Museums provides a unique comparative study of museums of cinema in varying national contexts. The book will be of interest to academics and students around the world who are engaged in the study of museums, archives, heritage, film history, and visual culture.
