The Life of Reason (Five Volumes in One) George Santayana, 2017-08-10 Influential philosopher poet and literary critic George Santayana was a thorough naturalist concerned with the ideal factors in human experience He held that everything possesses a natural basis and that everything natural has an ideal development In thiese volumes edition of his early work The Life of Reason Santayana argues that rational life is embodied in various ideal forms including religion and that religion may be embodied in reason However this is not to say that religion is grounded in science rather religion is poetic a rendering of natural events in a dramatic form Hence to take so called religious truths as literal claims is preposterous

Three Philosophical Poets George Santayana, 2013-09-12 The sole advantage in possessing great works of literature lies in what they can help us to become In themselves as feats performed by their authors they would have forfeited none of their truth or greatness if they had perished before our day We can neither take away nor add to their past value or inherent dignity It is only they in so far as they are appropriate food and not poison for us that can add to the present value and dignity of our minds Foreign classics have to be retranslated and reinterpreted for each generation to render their old naturalness in a natural way and keep their perennial humanity living and capable of assimilation Even native classics have to be reapprehended by every reader It is this continual digestion of the substance supplied by the past that alone renders the insights of the past still potent in the present and for the future Living criticism genuine appreciation is the interest we draw from year to year on the unrecoverable capital of human genius Regarded from this point of view as substances to be digested the poetic remains of Lucretius Dante and Goethe though it is his Faust only that I shall speak of afford rather a varied feast In their doctrine and genius they may seem to be too much opposed to be at all convergent or combinable in their wisdom Some who know and care for one perhaps of these poets may be disposed to doubt whether they have anything vital to learn from the other two Yet it is as a pupil I hope a discriminating pupil of each in turn that I mean to speak and I venture to maintain that in what makes them great they are compatible that without any vagueness or doubleness in one's criterion of taste one may admire enthusiastically the poetry of each in turn and that one may accept the essential philosophy the positive intuition of each without lack of definition or system in one's own thinking Indeed the diversity of these three poets passes if I may use the Hegelian dialect into a unity of a higher kind Each is typical of an age Taken together they sum up all European philosophy Lucretius adopts the most radical and the most correct of those cosmological systems which the genius of early Greece had devised He sees the world to be one great edifice one great machine all its parts reacting upon one another and growing out of one another in obedience to a general pervasive process or life His poem describes the nature that is the birth and composition of all things It shows how they are compounded out of elements and how these elements which he thinks are atoms in perpetual motion are being constantly redistributed so that old things perish and new things arise Into this view of the world he fits a view of human life as it ought to be led under such conditions His materialism is completed by an aspiration towards freedom and quietness of spirit Allowed to look once upon the wonderful spectacle which is to repeat itself in the world for ever we should look and admire for to-morrow we die we should eat drink and be merry but moderately and with much art lest we die miserably and die to-day
