reshape their political parties and to stake out new policy ground The degree of political autonomy available to them and the domestic organization of bureaucratic responsibility determine their ability to succeed Parties, Elections, and Policy Reforms in Western Europe Kerstin Hamann, John Kelly, 2010-08-30 This book provides a comparative assessment of social pacts between governments labor unions and employer organizations in Western Europe Using a dataset covering 16 European countries as well as eight in depth country case studies the authors argue that governments choice of social pacts or legislation is less influenced by economic problems but is strongly influenced by electoral competition European Politics Klaus H Goetz, Peter Mair, Gordon Smith, 2013-09-13 This book arises out of a specially commissioned issue of West European Politics marking the journal s 30th anniversary It examines the profound changes in the European political landscape over the last three decades including the fall of Communism progressive European integration territorial restructuring public sector reforms at European national regional and local levels changes in democratic participation protest elections political communication political parties and party competition and challenges to the welfare state The book also discusses how political science has responded to these changes in terms of its substantive focus concepts methods and theories Many of the 17 contributions included identify important challenges for the future including those stemming from EU integration the reduced electoral accountability of politicians the problematic legitimization of party government and the sharpening of the edges of the state Contributors include K A Anderson F C Castles C Crouch M Egeberg M Ferrera H Goetz L Hooghe E M Immergut R F Inglehart M Keating H D Klingemann H Kriesi M Lodge J Lovenduski P Mair G Marks Y M ny L Morlino H Obinger V A Schmidt P C Schmitter and G Smith This book was published as a special issue of West European Politics National Pathways to Low Carbon Emission Economies Kurt Hübner, 2018-09-03 The science is clear climate change is a fact and the probability is extremely high that it has been caused by humans At the same time policy responses are hesitant rather lukewarm and differ substantially between nation states The question is what drives and what blocks radical action This book makes the case that institutional settings path dependence and emerging change coalitions are critical in explaining climate policies across the global political economy Technological and social political innovations are key drivers for dealing with climate change This class of innovation is very much guided or suppressed by a national economy s established institutional settings By anchoring national case studies in a version of the well established varieties of capitalism approach the chapters of this book show why some economies are policy leaders and others become policy followers or even policy interlockers Moreover the case studies demonstrate the extent to which external events and institutional constraints from the international polity influence national innovation strategies Taking a unique analytical approach which combines insights from innovation policies and a variety of capitalism literature the authors provide genuine comprehension of the interplay between institutional settings political actors and climate policies National Pathways to Low Carbon Emission Economies offers a valuable examination of these issues on climate change that will be of interest to
