Abstract Food balance sheets provide comprehensive pictures of a country's food supply during a specified reference period. Sources of supply and utilization are shown for each item. Food balance sheets are utilized by FAO for assessment and appraisal of world food situations and to establish a statistical base for world agricultural development. Balance sheets indicate supply but not usage. Balance sheets cover production, stock changes, imports, domestic supply, exports, feed, seed, manufacture, waste, food usages, per capita supply for each commodity analyzed within a three-year period. Averages are given based on mid-year estimates. Accuracy of statistics are based on reliability of basic population statistics, supply and utilization statistics, and nutritive values. The balance sheets cover the 1972-1974 period and are categorized by 1. continental analysis, 2. economic classes and regions analysis, 3. country, 162 analysis based on FAO supply utilization accounts, SUA's of food products and processed foods. FAO Computerized Information Series FAO., OAA., 1995 FAO Yearbook, Production 2002 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2003-09-30

The FAO Production Yearbook is a compilation of statistical data on basic agricultural products for all countries and territories of the world. This yearbook includes data series on area, yield, and production of crops, on livestock numbers and products, and on population, land use, irrigation, and farm machinery for the years 1999-2001. It also gives total and per capita index numbers that highlight trends in food and agricultural production across all countries and continents for the years 1991-2002. Statistical information is mainly based on data provided by countries through electronic media, questionnaires of the FAO Statistics Division, or official statistics publications. In the absence of official data, FAO makes estimates based on the best information available. The data are disseminated to serve the needs of scholars, economists, policy makers, decision makers, as well as industry professionals and those professionals in the capital markets.
