Colonialism, Catholicism, and Contraception Annette B. Ramírez de Arellano, Conrad Seipp, 2017-10-10 The authors analyze the tortuous course that Puerto Rico has followed in evolving a population policy highlighting the island's rapid economic growth its role as a laboratory for testing different methods of birth control and the inevitable conflicts between church and state The strands of colonialism catholicism and contraception are woven into a background of profound social change characterized by shifting values industrialization mass emigration and technical innovation Originally published 1983 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again

books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value The Margaret Sanger Story and the Fight for Birth Control Lawrence Lader,1975 In a broad survey this issue of Current African Issues presents a multifaceted picture of the current state of the African economy After a period of falling per capita incomes that started in the 1970s Africa finally saw a turnaround from about 1995 The last few years have seen average per capita incomes in Africa grow by above 3 per cent per year on average partly due to the resource boom but also due to improved economic policies Africa receives more aid per capita than any other major region in the world and there is a significantly positive effect of aid on growth One of the most notable aspects of the current process of globalization is the increase in trade between Sub Saharan Africa and Asia particularly China and India The authors conclude with a call for policy coherence among donors The most problematic areas politically for policy change of those discussed in the paper are not aid policy but trade policy and the European Union Common Agricultural Policy This is a challenge to EU policy makers since the latter areas are probably the most important to change if we take our commitment to development seriously
