Reading the Decree David Gibson, 2011-11-03 What role does the interpretation of Scripture play in theological construction In Reading the Decree David Gibson examines the exegesis of election in John Calvin and Karl Barth and considers the relationship between election and Christology in their thought He argues that for both Calvin and Barth their doctrine of election and its exegetical moorings are christologically shaped but in significantly different ways Building on Richard A Muller's conceptual distinction between Calvin's soteriological christocentrism and Barth's principal christocentrism Gibson carefully explores their exegesis of the topics of Christ and election and the election of Israel and the church This distinction is then further developed by showing how it has a corresponding hermeneutical form extensive christocentrism Calvin and intensive christocentrism Barth By focussing on the reception of biblical texts Reading the Decree draws attention to the neglected exegetical foundations of Calvin's doctrine of election and makes a fresh contribution to current debates over election in Barth's thought The result is a study which will be of interest to biblical scholars as well as historical and systematic theologians alike

Daniel Strange, 2015-02-03 The reality of the West's post Christendom multiethnic multicultural context has meant that more than ever Christians face questions posed not simply by the existence of other religions but also by their apparent flourishing. If secularization is alive and well then so too is society's sacralization. Hence a theology of religions is arguably the most significant concern confronting Christian mission and apologetics in the twenty first century. There has been little evangelical theology offering a detailed comprehensive and biblically faithful analysis not only of the question of salvation but also questions of truth the nature and history of human religiosity and a host of other issues pertaining to Christian apologetics and contextualization amid religious pluralism. In Their Rock is Not Like Our Rock lecturer and vice principal of Oak Hill College in London Daniel Strange explores these issues and offers the beginning of a theology of other religions Biblical

How we worship determines what we believe. Prosper of Aquitaine a disciple of Augustine once wrote ut legem credendi lex statuat supplicandi the law of prayer determines the law of belief. This is significant for it expresses that how we pray determines what we believe. Exploring Worship engages in a comparative study of Catholic Evangelical and Orthodox teachings on corporate worship and suggests classic practices that help deepen the understanding and experience of worship. This is significant in at least four ways. Theologically it contributes to the important and continuing dialogue among Catholics Evangelicals and Orthodox. Historically it highlights the integrative potential between these three groups contrary to its history of distrust and outright animosity. Spiritually many Christians are seeking a deeper devotional expression. Exploring Worship provides an examination of worship rooted in the rich history and traditions of the Church. Pedagogically this will suggest practices that help deepen the understanding and experience of worship. Exploring Worship invites us to more critically intentionally and sympathetically reflect on the ways we worship and its place in our churches John Newton's Theology of Suffering

Yet he was also the leading pastoral counselor of his generation who kept up a prolific letter writing ministry of pastoral care to dozens of people from all walks of life who wrote seeking his
