and tools for building sustainable societies Bioregionalism is a philosophy with values and practices that attempt to meld issues of social and economic justice and sustainability with cultural ecological and spiritual concerns Further bioregional efforts of democratic social and cultural change take place primarily in the sphere of civil society Practically Carr argues for bioregionalism as a place specific community movement that can stand in diverse opposition to the homogenizing trends of corporate globalization Theoretically the author seeks lessons for civil society based social theory and strategy Conventional civil society theory from Europe proposes a dual strategy of developing strong horizontal communicative action among civic associations and networks as the basis for strategic vertical campaigns to democratize both state and market sectors However this theory offers no ecological or cultural critique of consumerism By contrast Carr integrates both social and natural ecologies in a civil society theory that incorporates lessons about consumption and cultural transformation from bioregional practice Carr's argument that bioregional values and community building tools support a diverse democratic socially just civil society that respects and cares for the natural world makes a significant contribution to the field of green political science social change theory and environmental thought
