Geography and Ethics James D. Proctor, David Marshall Smith, 1999 This book represents a landmark exploration of the common terrain of geography and ethics Drawing together specially commissioned contributions from distinguished geographers across the UK North America and Australasia the place of geography in ethics and of ethics in geography is examined through wide ranging thematic chapters Geography and Ethics is divided into four sections for discussion and exploration of ideas Ethics and Space Ethics and Place Ethics and Nature and Ethics and knowledge all of which point to the rich interplay between geography and moral philosophy or ethics Teaching Geography 11-18: A Conceptual Approach Lambert, David, Morgan, John, 2010-01-01 This book provides a practical guide for students and practising teachers as to how concepts can form the basis of geography teaching This is particularly important at this time as the revised national curriculum for Geography which takes effect from September 2008 has greatly reduced the prescribed content to be covered and instead emphasises that geography is underpinned by a small number of key concepts that provide the building blocks for curriculum planning The new national curriculum for geography identifies 7 concepts Place Space Scale Interdependence Physical and human processes Environmental interaction and sustainable development and Cultural understanding and diversity and these areas are reflected in the book's table of contents This focus on concepts represents a significant shift in how geography is to be taught in schools yet there has been little extended discussion of what a concept led approach to teaching and learning would entail This book will provide geography teachers with a theoretically robust and practical approach to curriculum planning based on the concepts that underpin the subject Envisioning Human Geographies Paul Cloke, Philip Crang, Mark Goodwin, 2014-02-24 Bringing together many of the leading human geographers from around the English speaking world Envisioning Human Geographies offers a series of personal visions for the future of human geography The result is a vigorous and far sighted debate about what human geography could and should be concerned with in the twenty first century The individual contributors develop their arguments to address the shape and direction of human geographies with each chapter looking forward and envisioning an intellectual future for the subject The result is a set of powerful statements written around the themes of space nature enclosure political economy non representation post colonialism feminism post structuralism computation morality spirituality activism The statements are tied via an introduction that discusses the ideological academic and aesthetic prompts that fire the human geographical imagination Envisioning Human Geographies maps out important new territories of enquiry for human geography and is essential reading for all students studying the nature and philosophy of the subject Geography in America at the Dawn of the 21st Century Gary L. For the Nation Nicholas R. Brown, 2016-09-29 The nature of the kingdom Jesus proclaims in the Gospels has long been a subject of intense theological debate. More recently the lines of this debate have dramatically shifted as several leading historical Jesus scholars and Christian social ethicists have argued that Jesus' kingdom proclamation most likely expresses a first century Jewish hope for Israel's restoration. Yet while several are now sanguine that Jesus' kingdom vision constitutes nothing less than a full-throated restoration of Israel's nationality, they are just as certain it rejects a restoration of Israel's land. As such it has become increasingly fashionable to say that an authentic practice of the kingdom ethic that Jesus enunciates must necessarily be a territorial. The purpose of this work is to respond to these arguments and show why this can and indeed should not be the case. Through a careful and detailed process of historical investigation, biblical exegesis, theological exploration and ethical analysis, we will come to see that not only is the kingdom that Jesus proclaims inextricably landed, but also why such a kingdom is integral to articulating a Christian ethic of territorial governance.

Tree Cultures Paul Cloke, Owain Jones, 2020-07-12. The relationship between nature and culture has become a popular focus in social science, but there have been few grounded accounts of trees. Providing shelter, fuel, food and tools, trees have played a vital role in human life from the earliest times, but their role in symbolic expression has been largely overlooked. For example, trees are often used to express nationalistic feelings. Germans drew heavily on tree and forest imagery in nation building and the idea of hearts of oak has been central to concepts of English identity. Classic scenes of ghoulish trees coming to life and forests closing in on unsuspecting passers by commonly feature in the media. In other instances, trees are used to represent paradisaical landscapes and symbolize the ideologies of conservation and concern for nature. Offering new theoretical ideas, this book looks at trees as agents that co-constitute places and cultures in relationship with human agency. What happens when trees connect with human labour, technology, retail and consumption systems? What are the ethical dimensions of these connections? The authors discuss how trees can affect and even define notions of place and the ways that particular places are recognized culturally. Working trees, companion trees, wild trees and collected or conserved trees are considered in relation to the dynamic politics of conservation and development that affect the values given to trees in the contemporary world.

Building on the growing field of landscape study this book offers rich insights into the symbolic and practical roles of trees It will be vital reading for anyone interested in the anthropology of landscape forestry conservation and development and for those concerned with the social science of nature Swept Up Lives?
